Probation Plea Filed by Curley

By FRANK J. REILLY and CASPAR DORFMAN

WASHINGTON, June 25—In a last-ditch fight to save ailing Mayor James M. Curley from serving the six-to-18-months sentence for mail fraud conviction, his counsel today petitioned the Federal district court to suspend execution of sentence on grounds of physical infirmity and place him on probation. The motion was submitted by Atty. Nicholas J. Chase, who commented:

"This is the final effort. Beyond it there is nothing further to be done. Reports that we would seek a new trial for the mayor are without foundation."

Appeals for clemency on Curley's behalf have been "flowing into the White House from many parts of the country," it was disclosed by David K. Niles of Boston, member of President Truman's staff.

Asked if Mr. Truman intended to intercede for the 72-year-old mayor, Niles said he had no knowledge of such a move.

In support of the probation appeal, Chase submitted to Judge James M. Proctor affidavits as to Curley's physical condition, signed by Dr. Edward Schott, his physician, and the superintendent of the Cohasset Hospital, where the mayor was treated for diabetes and allied illness.

Curley will know his fate tomorrow, when he will appear before Judge Proctor at 10 a. m. Atty. Chase said if the court entertains any doubts about the seriousness of the mayor's condition he will ask for an examination by independent physicians.

The mayor spent a bad night at the Hotel Statler here, but his daughter, Mary Curley Donnelly, said::

"He is determined to go into court, even if he has to be carried.

"There is a numbness in his left leg that disturbs me very much."

Dr. John H. Cauley, Boston health commissioner, who is caring for the mayor with the assistance of a registered nurse, said:

"The mayor was tired and exhausted when we arrived last night. He was given sedatives. But he was restless during the night, getting only intermittent sleep.

"This morning his blood pressure was elevated. He complains of blurred vision in his right eye, numbness in his left arm and leg, and loss of power in his left arm.

"He was given insulin injections this morning for his diabetic condition. We have ordered him to remain in bed and see no one but his family and attorneys."

Curley was so drained of vitality when his train arrived here at 10 o'clock last night he had to be placed in a wheel chair. He had endured a fretful trip, eating little and being administered sedatives.

His son, George, was due to arrive here by plane today to join the rest of the family, including Mrs. Curley, his son, Leo, and Mary.

Meanwhile all efforts were bent toward conserving the mayor's strength to bolster him through the hours of waiting until he faces the court ordeal tomorrow.

So the strikers decided to produce one hour daily—and then smash the glass with hammers.

KELLY TAKES OVER

With Mayor Curley out of the city, John B. Kelly, city council president, today took over duties as Boston's acting mayor after being confined to the hospital since June 10.

Kelly was discharged from Kenmore Hospital only a few hours after Mayor Curley went off to Washington to face court.

Doctors advised Kelly that for the present he must forego arising at 6 a. m. to conduct his laundry work but that he is quite able to preside as the city's chief executive and sign papers necessary to conduct city business.

Coal Miners Pledge Strike Until Labor Curbs Modified

By NORMAN AGATHON

PITTSBURGH, June 25 (INS)—The nation's soft coal miners today prepared to wage a long strike in an effort to smash the Taft-Hartley labor bill by crippling industry.

Rank-and-file miners, especially those in Pennsylvania and West Virginia, promised a full-fledged strike by noon.

Early preliminary reports placed the number of miners on strike at 221,000 -- 20,000 more than yesterday. The coal mine administration and mine operators said they expected the figure to grow until the nation's entire coal industry is gripped by the walkout.

Unofficial reports showed 48,000 miners idle in Pennsylvania. West Virginia had 47,000, Kentucky and Tennessee 40,000. Alabama reports showed all mines were closed and 22,000 miners idle. Illinois and Indiana had 34,000 miners who failed to report for work. Virginia, Maryland, Ohio and others scattered across the nation were reported at 30,000.

The NCMA estimated that Tuesday's production loss was between 1,850,000 and 2,000,000 tons.

The National Coal Ass'n reported the nation had an overall coal supply of about 30 days.

Generally the miners believe the labor bill, which became law Monday, will shackle them to their jobs and wreck their union.

Resentment against the Taft-Hartley bill was heavy throughout the Pennsylvania coal camps.

Miners said they thought they did the right thing by striking—their fourth since December, 1946.

Typical comment from the miners came from Fred Leska, a veteran digger near Bridgeville, Pa.:

"We're out again, but we did right. I don't know for how long, but you can bet it'll be until they modify the Taft-Hartley bill."

However, the miners still insisted they don't want to strike because of the financial beating they'll take.

They felt they spearheaded a general walkout of AFL and CIO unions and wondered why other unions did not follow.

The first two weeks of a general mine strike will not work any hardship on the diggers. Friday they receive their $100 vacation bonus plus two weeks pay. After that, they said, "we'll see what happens."

Industrialists said the work stoppage did not take them by complete surprise but its magnitude and the speed with which it swept across the nation caught them off balance.

Continue Hearings On Youth Training

WASHINGTON, June 25—Hearings on Universal Military Training will continue, the House Armed Services Committee assured.

"Obstructionists," who last Saturday advocated dropping the legislation at this session, were singularly absent at the latest session.

Chairman Walter G. Andrews (R.) of New York called not only for renewed action on the vital security issue, but also for continuous hearings after July 7.

Opponents of a training program also will be given an opportunity to be heard after the July 7 resumption of hearings.

'Will I Get Chair?' Mrs. Cote Is Quoted

By STEVE O'LEARY and JAMES F. McENANENY

PLYMOUTH, June 24—"What will happen to me—will I go to the chair?" These words came from the lips of Mrs. Bertha Cote, on trial here charged with the murder of her husband, Rene, when she was questioned at Plymouth jail last Jan. 9 while being held as a material witness in the bludgeon slaying, a Brockton police lieutenant testified today.

Lt. D. Edward Sullivan said further, that Mrs. Cote told him she knew the weapon that killed her husband but would not tell "what it was or where it was."

At that time, Walter Steele, whom Mrs. Cote accused as her husband's slayer and her secret lover, was under arrest charged with the murder and she was a material witness.

"I was with Lt. Newman," Sullivan testified, "and I asked her to tell m ethe true story because everyone felt that she had murdered her husband. I told her the neighbors and other people feel it is bad enough, but then you have put the finger on an innocent man and accused him of this crime.

"She told me, 'I'll never stand by and see an innocent man suffer.'" Sullivan continued. "Send for my attorney and I'll tell you the real story. This is important. Tell him to bring a stenographer with him. I'll tell you a fantastic story that will go down in history.

"You mean you want to clear it up now?" Sullivan said he asked her.

"'Yes,' she said, and laughed. 'But what is going to happen to me? Will I go to the chair?'" Sullivan testified.

The Brockton detective said he told the widow: "I don't want to give you any false hopes. You'll probably get a life sentence. She replied: 'Does that mean I'll go to State Prison?' I told her women ordinarily were not sent to State rison, but that they were sentenced to the Women's Reformatory in Sherborn. She said she had heard of this place from girls who had been in there."

Sullivan testified that he told her "we are going to clean all the catch basins on Harvard st. to find the weapon."

"You won't find anything there," Sullivan quoted her as replying.

"Is it in the apartment," Sullivan said he asked and quoted her as replying, "No, it isn't."

The police lieutenant testified that when he told her, "We could get prints from the death weapon," she answered:

"There are no prints on the weapon."

Sullivan said he asked her if it had been washed off and she replied, "No."

The final witness yesterday was Police Chief Oscar A. Johnson of Brockton. Johnson talked with Mrs. Cote three times at the Hotel Bryant where she was staying early in January.

On one occasion he asked her if she had slept well the night before and she told him that she had. Johnson said he told her she had done better than he could because he couldn't get her story of Walter Steele out of his mind.

"All you told us about him would send him to the electric chair. I wouldn't want the young man's blood on my conscience," the chief said he told her.

"I can't help it, I told the truth" the chief quoted Mrs. Cote as replying.

Strangely enough, Walter Steele's appearance on the witness stand where he faced the defendant across half the crowded courtroom did not prove a period of tenseness and drama.

Mrs. Cote's accusation of Steele not only as her husband's slayer but as a man with whom she had engaged in intimacies had been read to the jury by police stenographer Claire Cassidy, along with Steele's denials, made as the two sat face to face at Brockton police headquarters.

Now, with the short, slim, pink-cheeked young man on the stand in heather sport jacket and gabardine trousers, Mrs. Cote often smiled—not in scorn, but amusedly.

Steele had been "lonesome." He took Mrs. Cote out riding four times "for companionship," twice on daytime business trips and twice in the evening when they "parked." There were no "improper advances," no "intimate relations," only "a demonstration of affection."

The witness had been bilked by Rene Cote out of $750, invested on a 50-50 basis to purchase three automobiles admittedly worth $5000. Cote told him the cars were being disposed of to settle an estate. Rene Cote's widow smiled broadly at that.

Steele also grinned, admitted it was wrong to take out another man's wife secretly, insisted he did not do so to learn more about Cote's automobile deal, denied he killed Cote. Hardly anybody in the courtroom thought he did. He PLYMOUTH, June 25 (AP)—Brockton Police Lt. D. Edward Sullivan testified today Mrs. Bertha Cote told him "you have the real story almost" when he accused her of slugging her husband to death in an argument over a dancer.

Sullivan testified she told police that she knew the death weapon and that footprints found in the snow outside the Cot eapartment were planted to mislead investigators.

STUDIED STEELE

PLYMOUTH, June 25—Mrs. Bertha Cote intently studied Walter Steele during his period on the stand—so intently that she did not take a single reference note all the while he testified.

Throughout the trial the defendant has scribbled notes on the testimony of each witness, usually passing them over to her attorney, Eben G. Townes.

Bertha's Conflicting Stories Retold Jury

PLYMOUTH, June 25—The ninth day of the Cote murder trial opened at 10 a. m., today, with Brockton Police Lt. D. Edward Sullivan called as the first witness. He was on the stand earlier in the trial as a state witness.

LT. SULLIVAN

As Sullivan approached the bench, Asst. Dist. Atty. Wheatley called for a bench conference. Later clothing was shown Sullivan and then men's pants and other clothing. Sullivan stated that the articles were in the Cote apartment and were admitted as exhibits.

Wheatley then produced a pair of white rubbers he showed to the court and then to the jury.

Q—Where did you find these. A—Underneath the radiator.

Q—And that was on Dec. 28 that you saw these rubbers underneath the radiator. A—Yes.

Q—I am going to show you a picture of the interior of the Cote apartment on the morning that the body was found. What was behind that door. A—A low table.

Q—Did you notice anything that morning on that table. A—I did.

Q—What was it. A glass fishbowl, a glass vase about 18 inches tall, containing an artificial fern which extended about two feet above the vase.

Q—What if anything did you notice about the arrangement of those objects. A—The goldfish bowl was toward the front of the table, with fish swimming around in it. The vase containing the fern was standing upright at the rear of the table.

Q—Did you examine the Christmas tree with regard to its decorations. A—I did. There were balls, tinsel, angels hair. None of the decorations had been loosened from the tree. The tree was lying on the floor. All the decorations were still attached, none of them were broken.

Q—From the night of the second of January during which you spoke of conversations at the Brockton police station, did you and other officers make an investigation concerning Steele's whereabouts and associates immediately. A—We did. Lt. John N. Sullivan, Lt. Newman and myself went to the Plymouth Motor Co. We called Mr. Hinch and obtained a key from him. We entered, and we searched a car that was in the garage. We went through the tool box and took a wrench. Then we went to Steele's home on Gladstone st., talked with his mother and obtained permission to make a search, went upstairs, and took a tan polo coat, a pair of trousers and a pair of shoes. Then we returned to the police station.

Q—Did you make any further investigation during the following day. A—I didn't. Some of the other officers did.

Q—Now sometime was a complaint issued charging Steele with murder. A—Yes, sir.

Q—Who signed that complaint. A—I did.

Q—And was Steele arraigned in Brockton District Court. A—Yes, sir.

Q—Where and when did hearing of complaint take place. A—Jan. 20, in Brockton District Court.

Q—Who was sitting. A—Judge Rowe.

Q—Well, on that morning did the defendant in this case take the stand, and testify against Steele being in her apartment on the morning of the 28th of December. A—She did not.

Q—Why not.

Townes—I object.

Judge Forte—The question is excluded.

Pegler Blasts Amusement Field Underworld

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Copyright, 1947, King Features Syn., Inc.

I think we may say that the public interest in the new underworld of the amusement industry, including baseball, pugilism, football, the night clubs, radio and the movies was awakened about the first of this year by George Raft, the Hollywood tough guy who, strangely enough, nevertheless employs a bodyguard known as Killer Gray to protect him from nameless perils.

Raft did this by trimming a sucker several years ago in the apartment of Leo Durocher, the manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers. The case just faded away for various reasons, one of them being that the mugg was not a reliable witness.

And there it lay until last fall when there were several querulous complaints on our sports pages on the inhospitality of Leo Durocher to the baseball writers and his warm cordiality to a number of unnamed characters referred to as Hollywood bums. This meant Raft and Gray.

I think it annoyed me to think of baseball writers hanging off that way, and touching their caps to Durocher, that foulmouthed hoodlum, while he entertained this Hollywood trash.

I used to write sports and most of us got along nicely with most of the sports people, although we did have some very robust personalities.

Most of us respected most of them and vice versa, but I think that if this dirty-talking plug-ugly had barred the baseball reporters fro mhis office or the clubhouse in this manner in those days we wouldn't have gone whining to the readers about the indignity.

My low opinion of Durocher dated way back to my own days on the sports side. We used to hear clubhouse gossip about him when he was with the Yankees, but he was not very important, so we ignored it.

Then, when this talk of Durocher's rudeness and his fellowshipping with the Hollywood trash was going on last fall, I asked old Ed Berrow, for many years the business manager of the Yankees, but now retired, why they ever let him get out of the American League. For all his nasty disposition and a low batting average, he was a very fine infielder and an aggressive, energetic fellow.

The American League isn't bowing that sort of people over to the National, or vice versa, except for special reasons.

But Mr. Barrow said no, there was no special reason the Yankees let him go, except that he didn't get along with little Miller Huggins, their manager at the time. But that didn't explain why the other seven clubs passed him up. And then Mr. Barrow gave me the argument that he thought was the clincher.

"We had him watched for three years," he said.

U.S. Reveals Siegel Biggest Dope Agent

LOS ANGELES, June 25 (INS)—Police doggedly trying to find the elusive underworld trail to the slayer of Benjamin "Bugsy" Siegel, 42-year-old West Coast gangland czar, were aided today by Uncle Sam's tough narcotics agents.

William J. Craig, head of the Los Angeles branch of the Federal Narcotics Bureau, branded the slain racketeer as the biggest dope peddler in the nited States and announced that his office had joined in hunting the gunmen who gave Bugsy the works last Friday.

Craig said Siegel was the biggest dope peddler in the country and also financed international deals in illicit drugs.

Three friends who spent the evening with Siegel before he was slain have been subpoenaed to testify at the coroner's inquest scheduled for today.

They are Allen Smiley, business associate; Charles E. Hill, brother of Virginia Hill, now in Paris and in whose house the murder was committed, and Jerri Mason, Miss Hill's secretary.

Smiley, who had a bodyguard staying with him when served, was sitting with Siegel on a divan when the fatal bullets sprayed through a window and killed the racketeer. Smiley dived to the floor and escaped uninjured.

In addition to an international million-dollar opium smuggling ring, police were probing Siegel's drive to corner the bookmaking business from St. Louis to the Pacific Coast. Starting his race wire service in Phoenix, Siegel had moved fast to Las Vegas, Reno, Los Angeles and St. Louis, bucking old established firms, and making many enemies.

Chief Deputy Dist. Atty. S. Ernest Roll planned to question Russell L. Brophy, Los Angeles race wire operator and son-in-law of James M. Ragen, millionaire Chicago race wire magnate who was fatally wounded a year ago by mobsters trying to take over.

The Los Angeles Examiner today learned Siegel was president of the Nevada Projects Corp., which operated the Flamingo Hotel in Las Vegas. Previously he was described only as a stockholder.

Siegel took over when William R. Wilkerson, Hollywood publisher, resigned as president.

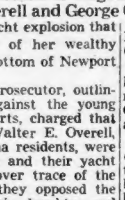
Lust, Greed Held Motives In Overall Killings on Yacht

SANTA ANA, Cal., June 25 (AP)—Lust, greed and frustration, Prosecutor Eugene Williams told the jury trying Louise Overell and George Gollum on charges of murder, motivated the yacht explosion that sent the bodies of her wealthy parents to the bottom of Newport harbor.

The veteran prosecutor, outlining his case against the young college sweethearts, charged that Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Overell, wealthy Pasadena residents, were beaten to death and their yacht dynamited to cover trace of the crime because they opposed the marriage of their daughter and Gollum threatened to disinherit her from their $600,000 estate.

Declaring that Louise, 18 and Gollum, 21, were engaged in an "illicit, sadistic passion amounting almost to a frenzy," Williams promised to produce letters they exchanged, showing them "in unnatural conduct, pointing to the consciousness of guilt."



George Gollum

As soon as he had finished sketching the state's case yesterday, Williams began tracing, through witnesses, the movements of the principals last March 15, date of the tragedy.

Ray R. Donald, Balboa marine dock operator, testified he saw Gollum about 7:15 a. m. on the dock, and that Gollum walked away when he spoke to him. That testimony placed Gollum at the harbor about an hour before Mr. and Mrs. Overell and Louise arrived in their car with Richard H. Hornby, a marine mechanic of Costa Mesa.

Hornby testified that Overell hired him to work on the yacht's motor, that he accompanied the Overells and Gollum to the craft and set to work repairing valves.

Ted Junkermeier, another mechanic, was summoned today to tell what he observed on the yacht before Overell took him and Hornby back to shore that night and later rowed into the darkness to rejoin his wife and daughter.

Of Overell's return, Prosecutor Williams told the jury:

"While the defendants were helping Overell hoist the dinghy aboard, Mrs. Overell lay dead in the forward cabin. Overell was struck from behind by a section of iron stanchion as he descended the companionway into the forward cabin.

"Then dynamite was prepared, wired to a time clock and an effort made to cover up the fact that a murder had been committed on that boat.

"We will show the defendants during the next day or two rummaging through the Overell house, planning their wedding, talking business, until they were arrested."

Reds Charge Marshall Plan U. S. Trick

LONDON, June 25 (INS)—Russia's Communist newspaper, Pravda charged today that the Marshall plan apparently was designed to solve an American exporting problem and warned it was doomed to failure if it follows the Greek-Turkish aid pattern.

A Pravda article quoted by radio Moscow declared it was too soon to pass final judgment on the plan since it was not yet known what "conditions" would be attached.

The Communist publication, which hinted at the position Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov may take at the economic parley in Paris Friday, accused American business interests of seeking to avert a "ripening economic crisis" through the Marshall plan. Pravda added:

"If the authors of this plan follow the counsels of some excessively meddlesome American reactionaries and offer European countries conditions copied from the Greco-Turkish model then failure of the proposed program will be a foregone conclusion.

"It would appear that the Marshall plan represents a program for solution of the American export plan, providing for overcoming of the ever-sharpening dollar crisis in many European countries.

"The business world in the U. S. is thus trying to stem the ripening economic crisis of the U. S. by liquidating, or at least by softening, the dollar crisis in Europe."

The Pravda article added:

"Some say there really is no Marshall Plan, and European countries themselves should work out measures for economic reconstruction and development and say how the United States can help them. If it is so, the greater responsibility falls on the conference of the three ministers."

Vet's Mysterious Deer Island Death Now Under Probe

Joseph Bedugnis, 38, of Hyde Park ave., Roslindale, World War II veteran, who was committed to Deer Island for nonsupport June 14, died there four days later of mysterious head injuries which have prompted an investigation by the district attorney's office, it was revealed today.

A companion disclosure was that an inquest has been asked by Medical Examiner William J. Brickley, whose autopsy disclosed Bedugnis had a large fracture at the base of his skull, as well as contusions nearby.

Dr. Brickley also found evidence the war veteran had been given medical treatment for head injuries before he arrived at Deer Island on the 14th.

Penal authorities, including Penal Comr. Maxwell Grossman and George Mulcahey, master at Deer Island, said Bedugnis, who had been treated for alcoholism after arrival, had not complained of head injuries. Their own inquiry established he had not suffered them there, they said.

The veteran's family pressed for an all-out investigation, going to Asst. Atty. Gen. Joel Miller, who contacted the district attorney's office.

Lt. Raymond A. L. Monahan of the homicide squad and Harold Stapleton, police stenographer, went to Deer Island and made a report after questioning a number of persons there.

Police records show Bedugnis was arrested at his home at 5 a. m., June 14 for violation of probation on the non-support charge brought by his wife, Marion.

Her divorce decree had become final the previous day.

He was taken to the Hyde Park station, removed to City Prison and later brought into municipal court to be committed for three months.

Nowhere along the line did the records make reference to head injuries, although after death it was reported a medical "cocoon" was found to have been affixed to his head.

Army Bans Cigaret Shipments to Austria

FRANKFURT, Germany, June 25 (AP)—The U. S. Army today banned shipment of American cigarets to military personnel in Austria and France, effective July 1.

Mailing of tobacco goods to Germany was prohibited March 26. The Army said it hoped the order would "cut black market trading in cigarets, tobacco and cigars."

FAMILY ROUTED IN CHARLESTOWN FIRE—Mrs. Mary Cavanaugh and her five children (l. to r.), Arlene, 9; Mary, 12; twins John and Robert, 2, and Dorothy, 10 months, were routed today when flames roared through their Washington st., Charlestown, home. Fireman Son Aids Chief in Saving Woman

A district fire chief and his fireman son early today rescued a woman neighbor when fire broke out in her Dorchester apartment, while in Charlestown, two hero policemen rescued nearly a score of people when flames roared through a three-story wooden dwelling and spread to two adjoining buildings.

Patrolman Francis Hagner

In a third fire, half a dozen stores and shops in the old Washington Market at Washington and Lenox sts., Roxbury, were partially destroyed when flames swept through the old landmark, once headquarters for Roxbury Democrats.

In Dorchester, District Chief Michael G. Foley and his son, Robert, occupants of the third-floor apartment of a three-story wooden dwelling on Santuit st., smelled smoke and, after forcing a front porch window on the second floor, carried Mrs. Agnes Bartlett, 47, to safety.

Mrs. Bartlett was taken to Boston City Hospital suffering from smoke inhalation. Firemen confined the flames to the living room of the Bartlett apartment with damage of $100.

Flames shot 100 feet in the air when fire swept a three-story six-apartment building in Washington st., Charlestown, after roaring through the dwelling from cellar to roof.

Patrolman Francis Hagner and John Donovan, rushing to the scene in their cruising car, dashed into the building arousing sleeping occupants.

Hagner, trapped on the second floor, escaped by dropping to the ground from a window.

At the Washington Market fire three firemen were partially overcome by smoke and taken to City Hospital for treatment. They were Ralph Borden, Frank Utley and Charles O'Brien. The four alarms were sounded when the flames spread from the one-story stores to the rambling wooden hall in the rear.

Investigation disclosed that the combination of the safe in the Stark Market had been broken and cigaret vending machines tampered with. Fire officials believed the blaze may have been started by thieves.

No Bail for 3 In Lynn Killing

Charged with sludgeon slaying of a 62-year-old Lynn manufacturer, a 15-year-old boy and a man of 25 today pleaded not guilty when arraigned in Lynn District Court and were ordered held without bail for the grand jury.

The boy, Roy F. Shurger, Jr., was arraigned in the judge's chambers because of his youth. The other defendant is Herbert J. Douglas.

The boy's mother, Mrs. Laura A. Shurger, 34, of Lynn, was also arraigned today. She is charged with being an accessory after the fact of murder and was held on bonds of $2500, her bail having been reduced from $25,000.

The three were arrested in Ithaca, N. Y., several days after the battered body of David Rosen was found in the office of his manufacturing plant on June 4. The two wallets which he usually carried on his person, police said, were missing.

Ontario Police Hunt Strangle Slayer of Nurse

COCHRANE, Ont., June 25 (INS)—Police today searched a wide northern Ontario area for the slayer of Velair Vanderbelt, 22, of Toronto.

The girl, serving as a hospital nurse in Cochrane, was found strangled with a plastic belt from her own dress in a swamp area. Authorities said she had attended a cottage party.

5000 To Strike in Shipyards

More than 5000 Greater Boston shipyard workers were poised today to join the strike called by the CIO United Marine and Shipbuilding Workers Union, effective at midnight tonight, to enforce demands for a wage increase of 13 cents an hour and other benefits.

After attending a mass meeting at Quincy High School to obtain last minute instructions, approximately 4000 employes at the Fore River plant of the Bethlehem Steel Co., greased their machines and began turning in their tools, as union leaders mobilized pickets to ring the plant.

First to walk out in the nationwide strike called by the union will be 1500 workers at the East Boston repair plant of the company. They were expected to quit at noon, with workers at the adjoining Simpson drydock accompanying them.

By agreement between the union and Fore River management the main office of the company will not be picketed, it was reported. This was to permit draftsmen working on plans for the two new Navy cruisers due for delivery next year, and emergency and maintenance crews to continue work.

At the workers' mass meeting in the Quincy High School, John F. McGonagle, national representative of the union, took occasion to attack the Taft-Hartley labor bill as "the most vicious piece of anti-labor legislation ever to be enacted."

McGonagle claimed that absolute refusal of the Bethlehem company management to negotiate the union demands forced the strike.

Andrew Pettie, regional union director, said the contract with the company expired Monday night, but tonight's strike deadline was enforced by the 30-day cooling-off period required under the Smith-Connolly Act.

Maine Summer Homes In Four Counties Looted

PORTLAND, Me., June 25—More than $15,000 worth of antique furniture, silver and glassware has been stolen from summer homes in Cumberland, Androscoggin, Oxford and Kennebec counties, it was reported today as deputy sheriffs of the four jurisdictions launched a search for the thieves and loot.

Legion to Join Navy in Honoring John Paul Jones

Special ceremonies, parades, band concerts and other observances are planned by the American Legion to augment plans of the Navy Dept. for commemoration of the 200th birthday anniversary of John Paul Jones, Revolutionary hero, on Sunday, July 6, according to plans formulated today.

They were included in a statement issued by National Com. Paul H. Griffith of the Legion while officers of the Navy in Boston were preparing a combination aid and land observance to center at the Navy Yard in Charlestown.

"Legion posts are preparing programs or will take part in those being arranged by the Navy," Com. Griffith said: "Most naval posts of the Legion will sponsor special ceremonies. There will be parades, band concerts, speakers and fireworks in many instances."

Observance by the Navy itself at the Charlestown yard will center aboard the USS Frigate Constitution, historic sea fighter, while nearly a dozen other vessels with more modern war records are to be opened for public inspection during the "open house" period of 1 to 5 p. m.

One of the modern fighters, bound to receive a lot of attention from the thousands of visitors on that day will be the battleship USS New Mexico, flagship of the task force commander at Okinawa and credited as the ship to have delivered "a greater weight of ammunition on the enemy than any ship in the entire course of history."

Coupled with the battle-scarred craft will be vessels built too late to enter into the hostilities but bearing many innovations that were designed to end the war more quickly in the event that the atom bomb did not live up to expectations.

Ex-Chief Pope Addresses New England Firefighters

Former Chief Samuel J. Pope of Boston, Chief Daniel B. Tierney of Arlington, and Chief Alfred H. Koltonski of Rutland, Vt., were speakers at the opening of the 25th anniversary conference of the New England Ass'n of Fire Chiefs, at Wentworth by the Sea, N. H.

A memorial service for 23 fire chiefs who died during the past year, conducted by Rev. Joseph F. Shields of the Immaculate Conception Church, Portsmouth, N. H., featured the opening session.

Bradley Seen Chief of Staff

WASHINGTON, June 25 (INS) —Speculation as to a successor for Dwight D. Eisenhower as chief of staff centered today around Veterans Administrator Omar N. Bradley and Lt. Gen. J. Lawton Collings, War Department chief of information.

Eisenhower finally confirmed rumors of his resignation when he announced that he would accept the presidency of Columbia University "sometime during the first half of 1948."

Bradley, an infantry general and former commander of First Army and 12th Army Group in Europe, is a close friend of Eisenhower and is believed to be the retiring chief of staff's choice as successor.

Washington observers expect Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, former Selective Service chief, to be named head of the Veterans Administration if Bradley is given Eisenhower's post.

Greek Food Gifts Promoted by Carriers

ATHENS, June 25 (AP)—Greek officials probed today into the shipment of thousands of food parcels from Greece to the United States, which Minister of Coordination Stephan Stephanopolous said had been inspired by transport companies making "huge profits out of the traffic."

Stephanopolous said the transport agents had encouraged Greeks who had received food parcels from America to send a "thank you" gift to their benefactors.

Most parcels contained not meat, as had been announced by U. S. customs officials, but quantities of figs, olives, grapes and raisins.

'My Country' Is Epic Story

Read "My Country," a stirring tribute to America by Win Brooks and illustrated with striking full-color pictures in The American Weekly, the magazine distributed with next Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

In one of the most inspiring stories ever written about America and what our nation stands for, the noted author and poet traces the glory of American principles from the first pages of U. S. history to Iwo Jima.

"My Country was born of man's everlasting crusade for the freedom of his body and soul," Brooks writes.

Also in next Sunday's The American Weekly, be sure to read "Uniform Divorce Law," by U. S. Sen. Arthur Capper; "The Lunts —In 25 Happy Scenes," by drama critic Ashton Stevens; "Murder Talked Too Much," by mystery writer Peter Levens; "Treating T. B. With Peroxide," by Paul I. Murphy, and "Secret Love Story of a King," by Howard Whitsell.

Q—My early cabbage and broccoli plants started well, but some seem to be dying. What is the cause?

A—You are now beginning to see the damage caused by the cabbage maggot. As the maggot is now down deep feeding on the roots, it is too late to do anything to control them. Make a note in your diary to use maggot discs next year.

Q—Will the cabbage maggot attack cabbage planted now?

A—No. Late cabbage is not damaged by the maggot. No need to treat the plant.

Q—Last year my shell beans grew well, but set very few pods. I used poultry manure as fertilizer. Was this too strong?

A—You were too good to this crop. Shell beans prefer soils that are not too rich. A rich soil encourages top growth, slow maturity and poor yields.

Q—Every year my nasturtiums get covered with little black bugs just about the time they are ready to bloom.

A—Aphis or plant lice always attack nasturtiums. They collect on the young growing parts of the plant. Spray with nicotine—1½ teaspoons to a gallon of water once a week until the plants are clean.

Q—I plan to set a row of asparagus next spring. What preparation should I give the land now?

A—To get land in shape for asparagus work in plenty of manure and test for acidity. Enough lime should be added to bring the soil reaction up.

Adm. Byrd's Daughter Wed

POST DEB E. BOLLING BYRD of Boston and William A. Clark, Jr., of Wallingford, Pa., are being married in Leslie Lindsey Memorial Chapel this afternoon with the bride's famous dad giving her in marriage. He is Adm. Richard E. Byrd, the Antarctic explorer.

The bride achieved her unusual name from her paternal grandmother, Eleanor Bolling Byrd of Virginia. For her marriage she is wearing the bridal gown of her maternal grandmother Ames of Boston, a lovely confection of ivory faille with a drop shoulder and bouffant skirt. Cascading over it is her mother's bridal veil and she is carrying lilies of the valley and stephanotis.

Constance Marie Carens

Katharine Byrd is her sister's maid of honor and another sister Helen, is a bridesmaid. Also in the bridal party are Mrs. Harry Stimpson of Brookline, Mrs. Paul Perkins, Jr., of Boston, and Mrs. Marshall Schmidt, sister of the bridegroom and a bride of last Saturday.

They are wearing white organdie with headbands and bouquets of blue delphinium. Mrs. Byrd is wearing printed organza with a summer picture hat and Mrs. Clarke a pale blue silk ensemble. The reception is at the Brimmer st. home of Admiral and Mrs. Byrd, where they have lived since their marriage in 1915. Bolling and her bridegroom will reside in Wallingford, and will both be juniors at Swarthmore College in the fall.

WEDDING BELLS will chime July 26 for Constance Marie Carens and Norman Joseph Hilton whose engagement is announced by the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Carens of Wellesley Hills. The future bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander E. Hilton, East Orange, N. J.

The bride-to-be is an alumna of the Country Day School of the Sacred Heart, Newton; Trinity College, Washington, D. C., and Garland School. Her fiance graduated from Princeton in 1941 and from Harvard Business School in 1943. He served as a lieutenant in the Navy for three years.

The wedding will take place July 26 with a nuptial mass at the Church of St. John the Evangelist, Wellesley Farms, and a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

Vatican Assails Yugoslav Regime

By MICHAEL CHINIGO

VATICAN CITY, June 25 (INS)—The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano accused Marshal Tito's Communist regime in Yugoslavia of a ruthless program of mass murders, tortures and religious persecution s in which perhaps 400,000 persons have perished.

L'Osservatore Romano published a blistering indictment of a regime it claims has killed and imprisoned hundreds of Roman Catholic priests and nuns, and persecuted other faithful.

The Catholic Action group's magazine also published the charges which quoted impartial observers as saying 85 per cent of the Yugoslav people "don't even sympathize with Communism," and added:

"It is a common saying that 400,000 Yugoslavs have perished since the beginning of partisan operations."

L'Osservatore Romano charged that the Yugoslav police checked all Catholic sermons and tried to impose their own subjects for church delivery; that hundreds of Catholic schools were closed, societies suppressed, and Catholic populations forcibly deported to regions where churches are unavailable.

Some of the closed churches, it said, are being used for grain storage.

The charges included:

1—"The Yugoslav constitution affirms the principle of religious liberty but the facts prove the exact opposite. In a series of speeches Tito attacked prelates and priests. The Croat republic president, Valdimir Bakaric, in an open letter stated the government considered the clergy an enemy of the people and to be operating for foreign reactionaries.

2—"Many churches are closed.

3—"Police agents are present at every church function. In most of Yugoslavia it is prohibited to impart the catechism to children.

4—"In two years 300 Catholic schools have been closed.

5—"The personal liberty of the clergy is subjected to a true reign of terror. Communists have orders to insult and beat up bishops and priests who are arrested on the slightest provocation and subjected to humiliating interrogations and tortures.

6—"Eighty-five per cent of the population, according to impartial observers, does not even sympathize with Communism. Despite persecutions, the Yugoslav Catholics show a tenacious attachment to the faith."

Soviet Spreads Communism Of Despair in Germany

By KARL H. VON WEIGAND

Dean of American Foreign Correspondents
Written Expressly for the Hearst Newspapers

FRANKFURT, June 25—The Communism in Germany is what more than one thoughtful man described to me as the "Communism of despair," not "Communism by conviction or from choice."

It is widespread and growing and is well-organized, rigidly disciplined and skillfully directed. It should not be under-estimated.

Various elections held in the four occupation zones are no criterion and cannot be under present conditions of German political thought.

In any zone, the Germans are not a free people. They have no country that is their own, no central government and no flag as a symbol.

Germany is the only country in the world today that has no flag. There is nothing whatsoever to inspire the Germans to make an effort.

In the American zone, Gen. Clay and his staff are trying to fight the growing apathy. It is like dry rot of the national spirit.

The British are more indifferent. In England and in the British zone they say, too freely, that they have no sympathy whatsoever with the Germans' suffering and hungering.

This attitude is taken in the face of general realization that the post war Germany is a millstone around Europe's neck which can take all Western Europe with it by going with Communist Soviet Russia or by becoming a spreading political, economic and social cancer.

German students and German youth generally are basically nationalistic.

Dr. Kurt Schumacher, head of the Socialist Democratic Party and an outstanding political leader in Germany, has been forced to try to arouse revival of a national spirit as the only possibility of getting the German people together again for efforts to survive.

While America, Britain and France are doing their utmost to suppress or prevent a national spirit from coming up again, Soviet Russia is encouraging and aiding it. The appeal is strong.

"The Ruhr industrial region is in the hands of the British but Soviet Russia, through the Communist control of the Ruhr labor unions, is running the district," a prominent German industrialist told me. He added:

"The British socialist labor government, in its efforts to nationalize Ruhr industries, is playing directly into the hands of Moscow and undermining American influence for free enterprise, which is what the Germans would choose if they had the freedom of choice."

This captain of industry complained bitterly that the British would do nothing against the Communists in their zone, while in the American zone the authorities are beginning to take a firm stand against Communist activities.

35 Groups Bombard Capitol In Drive for 100,000 Homes

WASHINGTON, June 25—Demanding action by Congress, 35 organizations staged a "Fight for Housing" today and bombarded Congressmen with personal visits.

Representatives of religious, veterans and civic groups from various parts of the country joined the day's campaign which opened with a mass meeting in the Senate Office building.

An 11-man delegation from Massachusetts is headed by John T. Galvin, chairman of the Mass. Allied Veterans Council, comprising six veterans' organizations. This group called on all N. E. Senators and Representatives urging enactment of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill before adjournment of Congress. They listed Massachusetts' housing needs as acute and declared that 100,000 homes were needed at once.

"The cases of 50,000 people looking for homes are drastic," declared Lewis H. Weinstein, chairman of State Board of Housing.

Rep. Kennedy (D.) of Massachusetts told the State delegation the bill was now before the House banking committee, the same group which killed it in the last Congress. "Yet the bill," said Kennedy, "is the only practical solution to the housing shortage."

The group said they had received encouragement from Massachusetts Reps. McCormack (D.), Rogers (R.), Herter (R.), Philbin (D.), Donohue (D.), and Sen. Lodge (R.); but that Speaker Martin (R.) and Sen. Saltonstall (R.) would not commit themselves on specific housing legislation.

Sponsoring organizations joining in the "fight for housing" are the American Ass'n of University Women, Veterans of Foreign Wars, League of Women Voters, National Council of Catholic Women, the CIO and AFL, National Council of Jewish Women, American Veterans Committee, National Catholic Welfare Conference, National Public Housing Conference and American Home Economics Ass'n.

Rallies are being held simultaneously in 10 cities in connection with the day's Washington campaign.

Quick Passage Seen for New State Tax Bill

The $17,000,000 revenue-raising plan to balance the state budget, substituted for Gov. Bradford's pretentious $59,000,000 tax program, came before the Senate today for approval, following its speedy adoption by the House.

Legislators predicted that the upper branch of the Legislature would concur with the House action and speed the measure to the Governor for his signature before the day's session ended.

The proposals designed to finance the $17,000,000 deficit in the state budget are:

An increase of 1½ per cent on net corporate income, raising the rate from 4 to 5½ per cent, estimated to yield $11,000,000.

An additional tax of 55 cents a gallon on sales of hard liquor, raising the levy from $1.45 to $2 a gallon, to bring in $3,000,000.

Doubling of the $1 tax per barrel on beer and ale, estimated to yield another $3,000,000.

While approving these proposals, the House threw out a proposal to increase horse and dog track taxes by ½ of 1 per cent across the board.

The House also rejected a measure under which the present tax of three cents per gallon of gasoline would be increased to four cents.

Easy to Hide Gray Hairs

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE, Beauty and Fashion Editor

FOR WHOM SHOULD a mother look young? For her children, of course! That's the way they want it . . . and that's the way it ought to be! And don't tell me youngsters aren't observant. We've got proof of their awareness . . . and how much they appreciate "mummies" who thwart Father Time with this or that camouflage.

GLORIOUS YOUTH . . . could easily be the title of this pictured model . . . her shiny black tresses as brilliant as the 30-inch rope of big, gleaming Coro pearls hugging her swan-like throat . . . and the pearl motif on her chignon. And as versatile as a long string of pearls . . . is a jumbo hair crayon to intensify natural highlights. Pearls and the youthful look are fall's finest fashion front!

Jet-black tresses which glisten like ebony-finished mahogany have always been our pet pride and joy. But inevitable age is seemingly catching up with us . . . and while we're in a confessing mood . . . we might as well admit that a few strands of silver have threaded their way at the temples. Or could it be that premature gray has a more happy affinity for sultry brunettes?

However, a jumbo hair coloring pencil . . . product of a firm of hair specialists . . . has been our aide de combat in preserving the youthful head look . . . and we've used it extensively. Allah . . . or rather the hair chemist . . . be praised!

The other day our 7-year-old son looked at our shiny hairdo . . . what his precocious mouth spouted virtually floored us. "Mummy," he said so wistfully, but so wisely, "you use a pencil on your hair, don't you? Well, I always want you to use it . . . don't ever get gray . . . I always want you to stay young and fool all the people on how old you are."

HAIR PENCIL SIMPLE TO USE

That's what the little fellow said . . . and how true, how true! Well, we wouldn't exactly call ourself old by any manner of means . . . but to a young shaver anybody over 20 is practically an old giant. He had seen us use the hair coloring pencil many times . . . and we had told him what it was. His interpretation of its use . . . however . . . was strictly his own, though it invaded our thinking and gave us a new slant on why mothers should do everything in their power to retain the youthful l

It is so much easier for parents and children to be really pals when age doesn't present itself as an obvious obstacle to hurdle. And active, youthful thinking is so definitely contingent on a youthful look . . . not a trumped up theatricalism, but a soft, subtle conquering of the passing of the years.

This jumbo hair pencil is such a simple thing to use . . . but its effectiveness is incomparable. It looks like a fat sausage . . . yet it is a specially compounded hair crayon on which the fingers can grasp a firm hold.

You wet it with warm water and then stroke it over the gray hair in any part of the head where the gray shows up. Or take an old toothbrush and pick up the coloring off the moistened jumbo crayon and then apply it to the mousey-looking locks. Then . . . brush the hair for a more even and thoroughly undetectable distribution of the applied surface color. It comes in seven shades . . . light, medium and dark brown, light and dark auburn . . . blonde and black.

Only you . . . and your child (if he watches you, as mine had) will know that Mamma isn't as young as she used to be.

For the name of the jumbo hair-coloring crayon, phone the Beauty Dept., LIBerty 4000, daily except Sunday, or write to me, care of the Boston American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

PREREQUISITE for Saturday night dating . . . and that special dressed-up look . . . are these darling cutaway gloves by Aris. They're made of smooth white glace . . . and true to the newest . . . have buttoned cuffs cut away for a flirtatious glimpse of a trim wrist. Duets of tiny-cut crystal buttons link the pert cuffs together. Cute? We'll say!—R. M.

Girl Makes Own Reputation

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: To put it simply, I have a bad reputation. I know there is no reason for it, so please don't lecture me on my supposed faults.

As I am only 14, this is liable to ruin my good times. Therefore, I would appreciate any help you could give me as to how I can gain back my good reputation.

"CARRIE."

Dear "Carrie":

Your letter is so vague about this "bad reputation" you say you have acquired that there is nothing on which I can base an opinion about it. In order to give you any kind of an intelligent answer, I would have to know what you mean by a bad reputation and how you happened to get it. People don't usually get this kind of tag for no reason at all, you know.

What makes you think that you have a bad reputation? You must have some good reason for your belief, and you probably know quite well yourself what things you are doing that give other people a poor impression of you. I suggest that you stop doing these things and begin to act like girls who have good reputations. Other than this, with so little to go on, I am unable to advise you.

From Paris Collection

By EILEEN CALLAHAN

PARIS speaks its mind in the French fashions now being seen here and its mind at the moment is full of the twists and turns of intricate dressmaking. Things like rounded, padded hiplines; looped drapery that forms both the yoke and the belt of a dress; curved torso lines from which fall tiers of ruffles; these are the dressmaker touches that Paris is concerned with.

The great Parisian dressmakers seem to have had enough of simplicity during the war years. They are celebrating happier days with a great freedom of line, lavish use of decorative touches, an extravagant use of material. Yet with all this, the Paris costumes have a tight, molded look that is highly decorative when combined with intricate design.

The dress sketched today is from Mme. Mag of Paris. Made of black wool, it has interesting drapery which falls from each shoulder at the front to a high waist. At the waist, the drapery is looped and curved to the back of the dress where it gives way to a circular torso line. Falling from the torso line are three tiers of the material, each tier edged in pleated ruffles.

Sunday Morning Brunch

By MARTHA LEE

(From the American Home Economics Convention)

ST. LOUIS, June 25—Ask your friends in for Sunday morning brunch—a delightfully informal meal served about the middle of the morning—which gets its name from being half breakfast and half lunch. Good food, the informal hour and that peaceful, unhurried, Sunday morning feeling, are certain to insure your success as a hostess.

And we suggest that you serve one of the Famous American Breakfasts which we are giving in today's column. These menus were designed by our friend Essie Elliott of California—one of the country's leading home economists attending the convention here in St. Louis. They are a few of many traditional menus served in various sections of our country—easy to prepare, and interesting enough to become the conversation piece of the morning.

NEW ENGLAND BREAKFAST

Orange Juice
Codfish Cakes Baked Beans
Toasted Brown Bread
Coffee

PLANTATION BREAKFAST

Orange Juice
Ham
Grits Gravy
Hot Biscuits Honey
Coffee

RANCH BREAKFAST

Orange Juice
Flapjacks
con Eggs
Fried Potatoes

FARM BREAKFAST

Farm Breakfast
Orange Juice
Fried Cornmeal Mush
Sausage Fried Eggs
Toast Coffee

The original menus were high in food value but in each instance, analysis showed that they were almost totally lacking in vitamin C. This vitamin is needed daily by the human body and unless deliberately put into the diet it can be the neglected child of the vitamin family. Because orange juice is one of the richest of all sources of vitamin C, it has been added to each breakfast.

You may wish to serve a second fruit—a fresh one in season—as a dessert for your lunch. The fruits available will vary with each season and each section of the country.

BAKED GRITS

1 cup cold cooked grits
1 tbsp. butter or margarine
½ tsp. baking powder 1 egg
1 cup milk Salt to taste

Mash grits until free from lumps; add well-beaten egg, melted butter or margarine, milk, baking powder and salt. Mix well. Turn in buttered baking dish. Dot top with butter or margarine and bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) for about 20 minutes, or until firm. Makes 3 to 4 servings.

Cote Trial

was a likable chap, if a little naive.

It was an odd day for a murder trial. The prosecution produced a rolling-pin. A possible murder weapon. Everybody laughed, even Mrs. Cote, on trial for her life.

In fact, it was several minutes before Mrs. Cote could recover her calm, serious mien. She put white-gloved fingers to her lips to preserve decorum.

This merriment was caused by the way state police detective-inspector John N. Sullivan produced the kitchen utensil, long featured in comedy as a housewife's weapon of defense against an unruly mate.

When he stepped to the witness stand Sullivan held it completely out of sight inside his jacket and under his arm. He drew it like a gunman pulling a pistol from a secret shoulder-holster.

This rolling-pin was found with other furnishings from the Cote apartment in a barn in Brookfield, on the property of a friend of the defendant's family.

Later, another Sullivan, Lt. Edward Sullivan of the Brockton department, testified he had originally seen it in the Cote kitchen.

Medical Examiner Pierce H. Leavitt had testified that Rene Cote's fatal skull fractures were consistent with having been caused by a rolling pin or a beer or soft-drink bottle.

But State Police Chemist Joseph Walker had found no blood on this rolling-pin. The State did not claim it was the Cote murder weapon. Nevertheless, it was put in as an exhibit for the jury to draw whatever conclusion it wishes.

In the record of police interrogations read to the jury by Miss Cassidy, Mrs. Cote accused Steele of coming to her apartment early on Dec. 28 with a metal automobile repair tool about two feet long, calling her husband a "rat," and saying he was going to "finish him."

She said she talked him out of it and he went away but came back and killed her husband.

"Wally Steele threatened me if I made any outcry whatsoever," she said. "That's why I didn't name him at first."

She said later she got a telephone call from a person whose voice she did not recognize, threatening her, if she told the identity of the intruder. But afterward she admitted there had been no call.

Steele, upon entering and leaving the courtroom, did not avoid looking at Mrs. Cote, as most of the witnesses have done. As far as any onlooker could judge, there was no animosity either way.

Presentation of the State's case came to a climax with Steele's dramatic testimony denying the statements given by the widow that he had been her secret lover as well as her husband's slayer.

Under questioning by Wheatley, the boyish looking Brockton mechanic told the jury that he had been out on auto rides with Mrs. Cote several times, but he denied her charges of intimacy and insisted he was not in the Cote home the morning Rene was slain.

In cross-examination by Townes, Steele told of going to Earle's garage where Cote was employed one day last October to learn the status of a deal involving three automobiles for which he had paid the murder victim $750.

Q—And while you were there Mrs. Cote arrived? A—Yes she did.

Q—Cote asked you to take his wife home in your car and you did that night? A—Yes.

Q—You went up to the apartment and you say you spent about an hour and a half there? A—That is right.

Q—It was a social visit? A—Yes.

Q—Several times you contacted Mrs. Cote by phone about the cars? A—Yes.

Q—You never found Rene Cote there when you called on Mrs. Cote, did you? A—No, I never did.

Q—But you were friendly with him? A—Yes.

Q—And would you have some conversation with him? A—Yes.

Q—About the cars? A—Yes.

Q—And what would he say? A—He would always have a good excuse about them—a real good excuse—he was a good talker.

Q—That takes us to November and you still believed that story about the cars? A—Yes.

Q—But it happened that there were no circumstances when you met him while you were with his wife? A—No.

Q—And how did it happen that you got friendly with his wife? A—You know the way those things happen, we talked on the phone—

Q—But you did not talk on the phone while he was there? A—That is right.

Q—Well, tell us more! A—We talked on the phone and in the phone talks we got friendly—you naturally get friendly—talking from time to time.

Q—Why did you get friendly with her? A—For companionship.

Q—And you would take her out, that is right? A—Yes.

Q—And you would take her out because you wanted companionship and because you were lonesome—did you tell her that when you took her out? A—I do not know—but I took her out for companionship.

Q—Did you ever tell your friend Rene Cote that you were taking his wife out for companionship? A—No, I did not.

Q—What did you chat about? A—Oh, anything, a little of everything came up.

Q—Miss Cassidy, in reading her transcript, today, had some mention in it of "loving," that you said you "loved" Mrs. Cote. Any of that go on? A—Yes.

Q—But Rene Cote was still your friend? A—Yes.

Q—You did not tell him that you were going out with his wife? A—No.

Q—Or that you were loving her? A—No.

Q—How long were you with her the first night that you met her? A—A couple of hours.

Q—There was nothing improper? A—No.

Q—Did you think that being out with another man's wife, and loving her, was improper? A—Well, the way that you put it—

Q—Well, put it your own way? A—It isn't right.

Q—It isn't right? A—That is right.

Q—Did you ever go beyond the point you describe in demonstrating your affections for her? A—I did not.

Q—Was there ever any suggestion made by you of going beyond that point? A—No.

Q—Were there ever any advances made by you beyond this point at all? A—No sir.

Townes questioned him at length about other trips he had made with Mrs. Cote, and Steele insisted "there was nothing improper—nothing in the least" in their relationship. He said they parked several times. Asked what they talked about, he replied: "The Lord only knows."

Q—On Dec. 27 you related that you worked on that night, but on Dec. 26 did you go out with Mrs. Cote? A—Yes. Probably for an hour. She called my home. I wasn't working. I took her for a drive and left her down on Warren ave. soon after 9 o'clock. She said she had some money and wanted me to buy some cars with her but I wasn't interested. She had called me and said she wanted to see me.

We drove toward Randolph and swung off the main road. Then a cruiser came along, flashed the lights on us and we drove home.

Q—You did nothing wrong on that occasion with Mrs. Cote? A—Positively not. We just talked. I didn't know what was on her mind. She said she wanted to see me for a few minutes.

Q—Yet you headed for a parking lot? A—I pulled off the main road.

Q—What for? A—That's a hard thing to define—I couldn't.

Q—You had no reason at all to pull off the road? A—No, and there was nothing wrong whatsoever. We only stayed there a few minutes, we just stopped. Then they flashed the lights and she got scared and said to drive on.

Q—Did the lights give you a scare? A—Yes, they did.

Q—But there was nothing wrong? A—Absolutely nothing.

Q—Then you went to 72 Harvard st.? A—Yes, I got off in front of her home.

Q—Did you know where Cote was? A—No.

Q—You spoke at one time of her smoking? A—Yes.

Q—And you don't like to see a girl who drinks? A—No, I don't.

Q—Did you care if Mrs. Cote smoked? A—No, I was just kidding about it.

Q—Did you care if she took a drink? A—It made no difference to me.

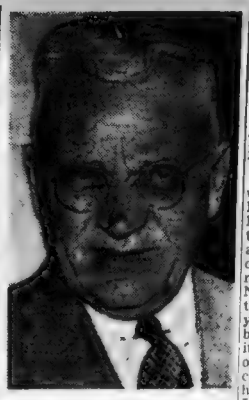
Q—Why would you care if another man's wife smoked or took a drink? A—I don't know—those things just come to you, for no special reason.

Q—You didn't call her on the night of Dec. 27? A—No, sir.

Q—And later, when you saw Lt. Edward Sullivan, did you say you were sick and tired of getting the run-around from Rene? A—I said I thought I got a run-around.

Wheatley then took over on redirect examination.

Q—Do you remember a conversation with the defendant at the courthouse in Brockton, relative to you being in her apartment the morning of Dec. 28? A—Yes.



CHIEF OSCAR JOHNSON
Questioned Murder Defendant

Testimony

for a bench conference.

Q—And at that time the officials believed the defendant was implicated in them urder. A—That is right.

Q—Then, on Jan. 4, did you talk with the defendant. A—Yes, I did. I went alone and went to the jail. I told Mrs. Cote that the morning that I signed the complaint against Wally Steele in which complaint he was charged with murder that I was not satisfied. Now, after my further investigation, I said: "I want to talk with you about various things that are bothering me in connection with it as a police officer. It is my opinion that Wally Steele did not commit this crime." And I asked her if she still said that he did. I said to her that, in mp opinion from my investigation, that he had nothing to do with this crime.

And at that time I said, "Mrs. Cote, from my observation of you from the start of this investigation I would say, that at all times, you expressed more signs of fear than of grief."

And I told her at that time that I thought that probably someone else was involved and that she was afraid to tell who it was. Then I told her that one of the most important elements in the case of this kind was the murder weapon itself and that if she was afraid to tell us who was there, on that night, if she would only tell us what weapon was used, that we could get that weapon and that it may still hold the prints of the murderer and that we might be able to get him and that nobody would know that it would come from you.

E. MacDonald

Lt. J. Sullivan

Told her that cases of this kind were very trying to everyone concerned. And that she was tired and that we all were tired as we had to work on cases of this kind 24 hours a day. I told her, that even if she helped us with this information, that there was a lot more work to do on the case and a lot more work to be done on it.

Then I told her, "Mrs. Cote, we are about to clean out the catch basins on Harvard and Winthorp sts. in an effort to find that weapon. That is how important it is to us." And I told her, at that time, that I did not expect to find anything there.

Now I asked her if we might find the weapon in her apartment. I, again, told her that our interest in the weapon was to try to find the prints, in order that we might get at the truth in the case. And I told her, too, that I did not even know when we found the weapon if we would find any prints on it.

Doctor Insists Chandler Sane But Fanatical

Resuming the stand in Federal District Court here today for cross-examination by defense counsel, Dr. Norris B. Flanagan, Boston psychiatrist, reiterated his opinion that treason defendant Douglas Chandler has fanatic beliefs, but does not show symptoms of paranoia.

Dr. Flanagan, called as a rebuttal witness by the government after the defense rested, was questioned closely by Defense Atty. Claude B. Cross concerning his talks with Chandler, alleged to have been the "Paul Revere" of the Nazi radio.

The psychiatrist said he found Chandler had no hallucinations and showed no signs of mental deterioration. He testified his examinations of the defendant disclosed the man had a fanatical belief that he was persecuted by Jews, and also on the subject of Jewish attempt to gain control of the world.

Special Asst. U. S. Atty. Oscar R. Ewing announced the government would call three more eminent psychiatrists as rebuttal witnesses to offset the testimony given by four psychiatrists who testified for the defense that Chandler was suffering from paranioa.

SHORTSIGHTED INGRATITUDE

WAR VETERANS who have lost legs, arms and hands are experiencing great difficulty in finding permanent employment in Massachusetts.

According to service men's organizations, less than 40 per cent of them have been able to find jobs.

This is a cruel and unwarranted injustice, for it is hardly the kind of treatment these heroic men expected a few years ago when they left their homes and careers to fight for their country.

Moreover, as James A. Lucas of Canton, vice-commander of the Amputee Veterans' Association, has said, "the blow of not being able to support themselves strikes the men harder than the shock of losing one or more limbs, and it is more shattering to their confidence."

Employers will quickly discover that veterans who have overcome handicaps are SUPERIOR WORKERS.

The very fact that they are seeking jobs proves that they possess both ambition and an extraordinary amount of self-control.

Any business man or industrialist who turns away an amputee and hires another applicant, possibly one who had the protection of a 4-F draft listing in the war years, is not helping his company and he is certainly harming the nation.

Communists won't fail to pounce upon such an obvious lack of gratitude and they will exploit it to the limit in their unceasing attempts to undermine and weaken the American government.

ONLY SOLUTION

ONCE MORE the City Hospital reports a woeful shortage of personnel. One nurse is often obliged to care for two wards. And the institution is forced to dispense with the numerous small comforts which are essential to the full recovery of patients.

These conditions, which are by no means restricted to the City Hospital, cannot be ignored any longer by responsible educational authorities.

The only successful way to obtain more nurses is to encourage more young women to enter the profession.

Instead of inducing students to train for work that is overcrowded and consequently destined to be the first casualty in a period of depression, the high school should place proper emphasis on the proven advantages of nursing as a career.

Furthermore, courses designed to equip young women for the study of nursing should be accorded their rightful prominence and dignity.

It would be worth while for the heads of all large hospitals in the Commonwealth to urge the Commissioner of Education to recommend instruction of this type.

'CRAZIEST PEOPLE'

MR. PAUL JONES, public information director of the National Safety Council, says pedestrians are "the craziest people you're ever to run into."

According to Mr. Jones, careless pedestrians fall into these categories:

"Danny the Dodger, who has a Red Grange complex and is likely to practice broken field running through moving traffic.

"Short-Cut Susie who sees Mayme across the street and dashes right over to tell her about Fanny's fight with Mary.

"Bertram the Bookworm who studies the racing form while crossing the intersection and is bound to lose one way or another.

"The Sauntering Egghead who is a contentious fellow always jealous of his right to take his time. If the light changes while he's crossing the street he'll challenge an approaching driver to run him down."

All this is more or less true, as every person who has driven an automobile can readily testify.

But that is no excuse for carelessness or recklessness on the part of motorists, too many of whom are not the sanest persons on earth.

When night's quiet sky is o'er thee,
When the pale stars dimly burn,
Dream that one is watching for thee,
Who but lives for thy return!
Wheresoe'er thy steps are roving,
Night or day, by land or sea.
Think of her, whose life of loving
Is but one long thought of thee.

—LADY DUFFERIN.

(Above is another of the rare poems written by wives in honor of their husbands. Lady Dufferin included the above in a letter to her husband when he was away on a trip.)

THE PROUDEST PAPAS in New York City are those of the Bronx. When a Bronxite becomes a father he doesn't just hand out cigars; he throws a party. Bronx husbands are reported easy to get along with. But there is one time they insist upon having the last word; that is in naming the baby. Annually on Father's Day in the Bronx there is held a "Proud Papa's Parade." In this hundreds of fathers march with their offspring. A variety of prizes is awarded at the end of the parade, one of which is for the father and son bearing the strongest resemblance to each other. By the way, Sir, how would you and your son make out in a contest like that?

BEAUTY — A Bostonian names as the "most beautiful" actresses of all time: Lily Langtry, Maxine Elliott, Lillian Russell, Barbara LaMarr and Billie Dove. I am not disposed to argue with the gentleman. Opinions as to what constitutes beauty in women differ. All I will say is that I think Jeanne Crain, when her natural appearance is not marred by the make-up men is as beautiful as any of the ladies mentioned.

Jeanne Crain

ASKING — Queries from clients. Q. You say no matter what activity is mentioned you can name a leader of it who was born in Brooklyn. Name a great newspaper columnist born there. A. Heywood Broun was born in Brooklyn. Q. We have been discussing Arthur Brisbane's crack before the Dempsey-Tunney fight that "a gorilla could lick them both." How much does a gorilla weigh? Do you think Brisbane was right? A. Gorillas come in various sizes. Some weigh as much as 400 pounds. I don't believe a gorilla could lick both Dempsey and Tunney. A sock on the chin will knock out a gorilla as quick as it will a man. In a ring battle the gorilla would probably leave himself wide open for a punch.

NEW COINS—"All five-cent candy now six cents." That's the sign I saw on counter of a neighborhood shop. Raising five-cent candy to six cents ruins the basic idea of many candy manufacturers. That idea is to have their product geared to the U. S. coinage. They want something that sells for one piece of money, either a nickel or a dime. With prices rising as they are I believe this country needs some new coins. Possibly a six-cent piece, a seven-and-a-half-cent piece. And one worth 12½ cents.

CAR PACKING—Today I watched a fellow in front of a hotel packing his car with the luggage and other things he, his wife and child had brought along on a trip. I felt sorry for the poor wretch. He certainly had a tough time getting that stuff in the car. His wife stood by offering suggestions and she certainly was no help. Incidentally, there is not enough space for baggage in the average automobile. The rear trunks should be twice as large. There also should be trunks on top and some on the side. At least that is how it seems to me when I try to pack a car on a trip.

SIDELIGHTS — A Pennsylvanian says a woman of McAdoo, Pa., gave birth to 20 children, consisting of 10 sets of twins, all boys. On that I will have to check. Sounds like a world record . . . So there is to be a film version made of Louis N. Parker's play, "Joseph and His Brethren." I can hardly wait to learn what Hollywood charmer will play the part of Potiphar's wife.

BRIEFLY — Add members My Name is a Poem Club: Norman Forman, New York City; Claire Nair, Montclair, N. J.; Nancy Clancy, Chicago, Ill. . . . The Central Valley N. Y., high school baseball team has won 36 straight games. If that isn't the high school record, what is?

FAIR ENOUGH

"There was nothing to those stories."

"Then why did you have him watched?" I asked Mr. B. "You don't usually put a watch on your people, do you?"

Mr. B. didn't have a very good answer for that.

It seemed to me that Durocher was in very bad company when he associated with Raft and when I really got to work, about the turn of the year, I found that one of our most prominent baseball men was really no better than a gangster himself, if there is anything in the old saying about birds of a feather. He had met Bugsy Siegel at Raft's place, near Hollywood, and some of the other companions of Mr. Raft were men listed in the books of the F. B. I., the Treasury agencies and most good police departments.

Their own parents might not know them by name, incidentally, for four out of five of them change their names and it is worth mention that they prefer Irish names, such as Kane and Collins, Martin and Barry.

I have heard that Durocher has broken with Raft and, in a manner of speaking, reformed, although I do not know in what other respect he needed reform. He just kept bad company.

I don't expect that he will swear off swearing or heckling umpires. His friend Raft had some very undesirable friends: Joe Adonis, for instance, and Little Augie and Longie Zwillman, of Newark.

Unfortunately for Raft, some of the guttersnipes who cover the saloon beat and never bring in any news but write free advertising about some of the dirtiest criminals out of prison took up for him. They took up for Raft and Bugsy Siegel and so did several radio acts and commentators. Why should they be defending Raft?

That made me inquisitive and sometimes when I get really inquisitive I find out interesting things. I never did find out why these types defended Raft, and just surmise that they have a great deal in common, but I bet myself something that the turn would come pretty soon which would dramatize and prove my contention that a lot of ostensible newspapermen covering the sewers under by-lines and some of them syndicated, were just underworld press agents. And a few of the radio people, too.

Now, Raft's old friend, Bugsy Siegel, turns up shot in the head and in the development of the scenario we are about to learn what a practical, realistic underworld this new underworld of the amusement business is.

Last winter, Frank Hogan, our district attorney, raised a fuss about racketeering and fakery in the prizefight business and you would have thought he had stolen a watch, the publicity he got. Four-flusher, scandal-monger, publicity-seeker.

But he proved up and he also proved the case of the football fix and then just casually a story came out one day that all this time Joe Gould, who used to manage Jimmy Braddock, the old heavyweight champion, had been cutting in on the earnings of Joe Louis under a trick contract, which is a very questionable state of affairs any away you look at it.

It is the more so when you consider that Joe Gould is a dirty underworld thief who somehow, probably through Jersey politics, got an Army commission during the war and was convicted by a court-martial of conspiracy to defraud the government in a racket at Camp Shanks, N. Y.

Then came the shocking announcement that Lucky Luciano, deported to Italy after serving part of a long time in the State of New York for prostituting women, had reappeared in Havana and was actually an unsung hero of our war and due for a medal of honor some day. That rumor actually got into print and onto the air as news, when it was sheer underworld propaganda for the head of a gang of narcotic smugglers.

It inally was traced to a well-known New York personality named Connie Immerman, who insisted aht Luciano was really a swell kid and the victim of a bum rap.

At the time in Havana, Luciano was negotiating to start commerce with Siegel, who had achieved recognition as the foremost American dealer in narcotics, and about the same time, Frank Sinatra, the moral example and leader of our youth, was noted in the society of this pleasant company.

Other entertainers turned up working for and with other gangsters in Miami, Chicago, Hollywood and Las Vagas, Nev., where Siegel now had opened an enormous and lavish plant called The Flamingo, which had been built for him by Del Webb, a western contractor who happens also to be one of the owners of the New York Yankees baseball and football teams.

These entertainers work both night clubs and radio and they are regarded in Hollywood and the Miamis, and I dare-say also nowadays in Palm Beach, as very social people, but only they have so much money.

I began to learn back there when I was working on the case of Willie Bioff, the union racketeer of Hollywood, that very few of the great magnates of the industry were above the social grade of Bioff himself. They liked him personally. He was their kind.

So it was not surprising to learn that Bugsy Siegel also was socially accepted in the Hollywood set. He and Raft were of the real Hollywood aristocrack.

Iti s taking shape now. We will se an underworld of narcotics, gambling, liquor, amusement, professional sports including racing, which is especially crooked in California, the radio, the movies and now also the jooks.

Hollywood

By Louella O. Parsons

HOLLYWOOD, June 25—I must say Agent Arthur Lyons makes his debut as a producer in a very pretentious way, in the new studio which he recently built in Hollywood. He'll make "Prelude to Night" with a hand picked cast. He's borrowed Diana Lynn from Paramount, Zachary Scott and Sidney Greenstreet from Warners, and he expects to get going in August. Well, if Sidney Greenstreet is anything like he was in "The Hucksters," everybody in the cast will have to be looking to their laurels.

Diana Lynn

"Prelude to Night" is by Dayton Stoddart and was a best seller. Arthur, who went to New York on business, has a deal with Eagle-Lion to release his production. One by one, our agents are becoming producers. Where do they go from there?

THERE WAS TALK that Donald O'Connor and Universal-International had come to a parting of the ways. He was said to be very upset over Dick Haymes going into "Up in Central Park" with Deanna Durbin, so I telephoned Don.

"On the contrary," Don said, "I am very happy. The studio just saw me in Deanna Durbin's last picture, 'Something in the Wind,' and is giving me one of the star roles with her in 'Up in Central Park.' At first I objected to playing it, because my part wasn't big enough, but now it's being built up and I like it."

Well, we print all the trouble that happens at the studios, so why not print the good news, too?

EVERY SUNDAY while I was in New York Anita Loos and Maurice Chevalier spent the day together. Anita was mighty mysterious about these meetings, and so was Maurice.

Now I learn they were writing the screenplay of "Babylon Revisited," which goes before the cameras in January, with Maurice in the lead, after he returns from Paris. This is the F. Scott Fitzgerald story and will be made by Lester Cowan, who is in New York to discuss the story with the two writers.

Right from Paris I hear that Chevalier was a sensation in "Man About Town" when it was shown there. It was originally slated for Raimu, but when he died unexpectedly Chevalier was put into the role and doesn't sing a note.

THE LOS ANGELES County jail farm head wrote Sig Rogell a letter and told him Lawrence Tierney had been a model prisoner—so good, in fact, that they released him before his time was up.

The jail head asked Sid to see that Tierney was given the picture originally slated for him at RKO. So Tierney goes into a movie at this studio.

There's just one thing. It's wonderful that Tierney's reformed and has taken to lecturing to other alcoholics, but I want to say one thing to Mr. Tierney. If he falls off the water wagon now and gets in a night club brawl, he will really be washed up. He has already had more chances than anyone has a right to expect.

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD: The lawyers of Hedy Lamarr and John Loder are at it tooth and nail, trying to get their tangled affairs straightened out before Hedy goes into court to divorce John. The whole thing is unfortunate, and it is too bad that the divorce couldn't have been avoided.

Hedy is so highly nervous now, that those close to her are begging her to go away somewhere for a change of scene, to leave the children with the very competent Canadian nurse she has. She should see new people and get a new slant on life. You know, there's a lot in getting a new viewpoint.

Don't tell me you don't remember Alice White, who was a cuddly star back in the Clara Bow days when cuddly stars were the vogue. Alice never quite equalled Clara's fame. But she certainly had her following.

Now, after seven years of being off the screen and stage, she's coming back in "Time of Your Life" with Jimmy Cagney. It isn't a big role but it is so good that Jimmy thinks it might start her off to a new career as an actress. Alice plays a wise-cracking "B" girl with some very funny dialogue.

I happened to catch a glimpse of her in the beauty parlor the other day and her hair is no longer straw blonde. Perhaps she'll go back to being blonde for this picture.

The darndest accident happened to Peter Godfrey, director of the Shirley Temple picture, "Mary Hagen." Peter tried to force open a jammed swinging door and hurt the two fingers on his left hand so badly that for a time it looked as if he might lose them. His condition is so serious that he has been taken off the picture and Vincent Sherman replaces him as Shirley's director.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD collected at random: Who's the blonde girl that George Sanders has been taking out every night? He's been keeping her name a deep, dark secret.

Stuart Barthelmess has apparently given up all idea of reconciling with Sonja Henie, and is now seeing Suzie Crandell.

That was Sara Hamilton out with Mark Stevens at Ciro's, his first date since his separation. Maybe Sara was giving him some good advice. She could.

The fabulous tips that Virginia Hill, the girl in Bugsy Siegel's life, gave, are now being discussed. Virginia seldom had less than a $1000 bill when she went to pay for her clothes. Talk is that Jerri Mason, reported as Virginia's secretary, is really Charles Hill's (Virginia's brother) girl friend.

Martha Kemp

Martha Kemp and writer St. Clair McKelway have made a property settlement and she will divorce him very shortly. She was formerly married to Victor Mature.

Sid Luft and Walter Kane, both Lynn Bari's ex-husbands, bumped smack into each other the other eve at a cafe. Sid, by the way, was with a very pretty blonde named Audrey Jackson. Meanwhile, Lynn has been stepping out with Phil Reed.

Georgette Winsor and Harry Cushing III, who took off for Las Vegas, changed their minds, but they will be married any edition.

John Craven, son of the late Frank Craven, and his wife are telling their troubles to a judge.

The bride and groom who won the trip around the world, offered by the Bride and Groom radio program, are Richard A. Fortune and Chris Saunders, both actors in a stock company.

Emil Coleman, always so popular in Hollywood, opens at the Mocambo with his dance band next Tuesday. Looks like a gala night.

Murvyn Vye seems to have replaced Bob Walker in Florence Pritchett's affections.

Bill Eythe spent the weekend with the James Masons and cooked a Mexican meat loaf, which the Masons thought was marvelous.

Wendy Russell, the girl who sought publicity by announcing her engagement to Walter Forell, at the Chanteclair with Polan Banks. Could it be she is going to be in "There Goes Lona Henry"?

I stopped in just briefly at the home of Maureen O'Sullivan and John Farrow, to wish Dame May Whitty a happy birthday. That grand young lady held court for the Ronald Colmans, the Brian Ahernes, Teresa Wright, Niven Busch, Edmund Gwenn and many others. Next to Dame May, the belle of the afternoon was Maria de Lourdes Farrow, one of the most beautiful children in Hollywood.

That's all today. See you tomorrow.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

IN THE theory of the American government, Congress appropriates funds and levies taxes. Such bills must originate in the House of Representatives. The control of the national purse is vested in that organ of government which is closest to and most representative of the people. Representatives are elected for two-year terms; the President for four years and Senators for six. Therefore, the representatives are most accountable to the people.

In the long struggle between the people and government in the Anglo-Saxon countries, it was provided by tradition and custom that the appropriations and levies should be made annually. This prevented the government from freeing itself from the people's representatives. In England that rule is rigidly followed. Because the American Constitution does not specifically say that the levies must be annual, the politicians have got around it by including a revenue bill provision that if no new bill is passed, the terms of the existing one obtain.

This is contrary to the spirit but not the letter of the Constitution. It is contrary to the whole concept of our institutions. It gives to the executive a power to tax which it was never intended that he should have. Bryce says of this:

"There remains the power which in free countries has been long regarded as the citadel of parliamentary supremacy, the power of the purse. The Constitution keeps the President far from this citadel, granting to Congress the sole right of raising money and appropriating it to the service of the state . . ."

Actually, by the use of the veto power, the President may, as he did last week, continue an obsolescent tax bill, which Congress would replace but cannot for lack of a two-thirds majority. In a word, the President could continue a war tax bill as long as he remains in office if he can hold a third of the membership of Congress in line. In the recent instance, he managed because two Republicans, so-called, voted with him against their own party. All of this is legal and constitutional but not in the spirit of American institutions.

The question of a continuing tax bill has received inadequate discussion and should be considered without partisanship but from the standpoint of responsible government. It is easier to do it now that the 1947 tax bill is dead letter than it would have been during the debate when partisanship was so violent.

The theory of continuing legislation is that the government cannot be left without funds. If Congress were to debate a tax bill, for a prolonged period, it could be illegal for it to collect taxes and it would have no legal funds to do its business. Therefore, as a practical matter, the protective clause is put in a tax bill that it continues until a new one is passed. Congress, for instance, will pass no tax bill this year, the Treasury collecting from the citizens on precisely the same terms as last year. And that can be done in 1948, as it well might, should a Republican majority choose to ignore any recommendations made by the President, of another party, in an election year.

On the other hand, it is traditional in free countries for the executive to subordinate himself in matters of appropriations and taxes to the national legislature. In Anglo-Saxon countries, most of the freedoms of the people were won because the rulers needed money. First the barons, and subsequently the burghers, won chartered rights and eventually government by consent of the governed by granting or withholding funds. It was only by making the levy annual that the executive was curbed.

The continuing tax bill, whether good or bad, obsolescent or essential, strengthens the executive as against representative government. The fact must stand that the basic legislative program of Congress has been vitiated by the executive and no substitute program has been offered or enacted. The processes of the war years are continued into peace years by the ipse dixit of the President without regard to the vote of the people. That is not representative government. It disregards the theory of annual responsibility for tax levies.

WASHINGTON, June 25—Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas and Navy Undersecretary John L. Sullivan got into the darndest discussion on taxation the other night. The cross-fire patter was so fast I thought I must be listening to Bert Wheeler and Joe E. Lewis—until I looked around and saw Messrs. Wheeler and Lewis at another table.

I am not making any invidious comparison but I wish to state that our Washington comedians gave the professionals something to worry about. The only thing lacking in the performance of Justice Douglas and Undersecretary Sullivan was that one did not smack the other with a board.

The occasion, which will live long in the memories of those present, or until their heads feel better, was a joint testimonial dinner to Joseph D. Nunan, Jr., and George J. Schoeneman, the outgoing and incoming commissioners of internal revenue. It will also linger long in the memory of Herb Blunck, manager of the Statler, because Morton Downey almost wrecked the hostelry's grand piano trying to heave it in the air while playing it.

The place was crawling with national dignitaries, including Treasury Sec. Snyder, Commerce Sen. Harriman and Senators and bureaucrats as far as the rapidly-astigmatizing eye could see.

BUT HERE we saw an anomaly that is truly Washington. The Capital is so used to dignitaries that a bunch of undignitaries, who came down from New York, grabbed all the limelight.

The latter group was shepherded by the nation's No. 1, undignitary, Toots Shor. By a weird contradiction, the stiffer he gets the less dignified.

Mr. Shor's flock included Mark Hellinger, who got tired of slaving in the newspaper business for a more fortune and became a movie producer; Eddie Duchin, a piano player; the aforementioned Messrs. Wheeler, Lewis and Downey; the piano-assaulting Austin Mack, the acrobatic Artie Rice, and a large gentleman named Quentin Reynolds who cannot make up his mind whether he is a writer or an orator, but who does very good at both.

Anyway, Undersec. Sullivan got up and said that the retiring Comr. Nunan had hung up quite a record as a tax collector—that since he took office on March 1, 1944, he had collected $5,000,000,000 more taxes than had been collected in all the 155 years previously.

From 1789 to 1944, he said, total tax collections amounted to $133,000,000,000. In the ensuing three years Joe Nunan gouged the taxpayers out of $138,000,000,000.

Whereupon Justice Douglas got up, and pointing to incoming Comr. Schoeneman, said:

"As a tarpayer, George, I hope you are not going to try to top that!"

UNDERSEC. SULLIVAN revealed he was from New Hampshire where they don't like paying taxes—particularly to a Democrat.

"It's kind of rugged being a Democrat up where I come from," he said.

"If the odds aren't 8 to 1 against us we don't think we're been in a fair fight."

Mr. Reynolds observed that Republicans had a place in the life of America.

"We feel," he added solemnly, "that every state should have one Republican."

Seek Hub Girl In Loew's Contest

A search for the Boston girl resembling Marie McDonald, popular MGM screen star, is being conducted by Loew's twin theatres and Yvonne's Beauty Center. The competition is open to all girls between 18 and 28 years of age, residing in Metropolitan Boston, whether a professional model or not. All entries must be mailed before midnight, Saturday.

Entrants must send in their photograph backed with name, address and measurements, addressed to the Publicity Department, Loew's State Theatre, Boston, Mass.

Winner will be chosen from stage of the State Theater Tuesday night, July 1, by audience acclaim and a board of three judges. She will receive a week's vacation spent at the beautiful Yvonne French Villa at Bedford, N. H., with a series of beauty treatments free of charge.

Runner-up will be awarded a trophy the gift by Marie McDonald, who is co-starred with Gene Kelly in her latest MGM release "Living in a Big Way."

"The Two Mrs. Carrolls" At Modern and Uptown

"The Two Mrs. Carrolls," with Humphrey Bogart, Barbara Stanwyck and Alexis Smith, is presently to be seen on both the Modern and the Uptown screens.

TRANS-LUX MAJESTIC

HIGH-HATTED GENE TIERNEY, one of Hollywood's most glamorous young stars, is to be seen in "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir," which is remaining a second week on Keith Memorial screen.

three-year Navy hitch, high-kicking Gene Kelly ... on the screen in MGM's "Living in a Big Way," opening on Loew's twin screens tomorrow.

Gene Kelly, Perpetual Motion, at Loew's

Hollywood keeps Gene Kelly in perpetual motion.

For one of the screen's fastest dances in the new MGM romantic comedy, "Living in a Big Way," opening tomorrow on Loew's twin screens, Kelly keeps going at top-speed for a dance routine which runs for eight full minutes.

Dancing in half completed buildings, Kelly taps on 2x4's which are 50 feet above stage level, swings from one building to another across a 25-foot space via a 50-foot ladder, jumps from a window ledge onto a teeter-totter, dances through a series of children's games which include Hopscotch, Go ... and Out the Window, Here We Go Loopy Loo, Drop the Handkerchief, Blindman's Bluff and Tag.

During the entire sequence he plays Pied Piper to more than 25 youngsters and not only dances but sings the words to the popular games. And never once can he and never once does he break the rhythmic movement of the dancers!

Billy De Wolfe At Press Party

Billy De Wolfe, local boy whose Mrs. Murgatroyd in Paramount's "Blue Skies" has registered him with film fans across the country, is to be his studio's guest at a press party this afternoon at the Copley-Plaza.

A favorite nightclub entertainer before he went to Hollywood to become a hit in his first picture, De Wolfe was in the midst of a New England vacation when Paramount dreamed up a two-week engagement for him at the Chicago Theater in Chicago's loop.

He has just finished a capacity run there and is here for a brief return visit before returning to West Coast where at the end of August he is to start with Bing Crosby in "A Connecticut Yankee."

Mother Dies Meeting Son

The sorrowing family of Mrs. Pearl Beattie, 50, of Beech st., Somerville, today planned funeral services for "Mom" who failed to survive the excitement brought on by a Chicago reunion with a son she had not seen for two years.

Mrs. Beattie died at LaSalle st. railroad station in Chicago in the arms of her son, George B. Beattie, 25, whom she had not seen since he was discharged from the Navy two years ago.

"Hello, Mom," was his greeting as he clasped her in his arms. She smiled and went limp.

Doctors used an inhalator for nearly an hour in a vain effort to revive her. She was then pronounced dead of a heart attack.

Accompanying his mother on the Chicago trip was another son, James, 12. She also leaves her husband, Richard, two other sons, Richard, Jr., and Robert, and a daughter, Mrs. Helen Goduti.

Mother Beats, Abandons Baby

GRANTS PASS, Ore., June 25 (AP)—State Police reported today a man and woman had confessed beating and abandoning little "Miss X," the blonde child found unconscious in a clump of bushes at Weed, Cal.

Sgt. C. R. Borgman said the girl, unidentified for 10 days, was Mary Jane Meddlin, 2½.

He said the girl's mother, Mrs. Lucille Meddlin, separated from her husband, confessed helping Hugh Gilreath, sawmill worker, in beating the child.

Bradford Cites Adm. Derby On Eve of Departure

Rear Adm. W. N. Derby today held a citation presented by Gov. Bradford in recognition of distinguished service to Massachusetts as commandant of the First Coast Guard District.

The admiral is leaving Boston to become superintendent of the Coast Guard Academy at New London, Ct.

Doyle's Tragedy: Boxing Claims Latest Victim

By AUSTEN LAKE

BOXING, OR PRIZE FIGHTING, today has another tragedy chalked on its sordid slate with a ring weary veteran of the ring wars, Jimmy Doyle, lying in the deep shadow after being hacked to a bloody pulp by "Sugar Ray" Robinson, at Cleveland.

This is inevitable and comes from trying to make a civilized sport of something which has its origin in the mortal furies of the hairy apes. For the original purpose of man-to-man fighting was to inflict great bodily harm and, naturally, death is par for the course. Later, when mankind developed police departments to regulate human behavior, the combatants were obliged to obey certain rules lest the victor be held for manslaughter. And in this enlightened age the primitive business is carried on with doctors at the ringside to halt the sticking when, in their opinion, either party is in danger of serious impairment, but not an instant before.

The general practice is to keep a fighter in the ring, reeling and groggy, to give the patrons their full money's worth of suffering. And such was the case last night, according to ringside press dispatches, when Doyle, wobbling an dall but defenseless, took the last crushing blow to the nerve centers of his head and crashed to the floor with such force as to aggravate his original injury. Call it accident if you will, but it was actually a fulfillment of the destiny for which he was there.

HERE IS ANOTHER INSTANCE of a fighter being sent to his fate, although not bodily fit and just recovered from a previous beating which rendered him all but paralytic. For in prize fighting, as in football, it is rarely the first injury which disables the athlete, but the second. Such was the history preceding the death of the late Ernie Shaff, who had sustained a serious brain injury in his bout with Max Baer before being killed by Primo Carnera.

Ernie had complained of dizziness and brain storms after Baer flogged him senseless, but went on with the Carnera fight rather than default his obligations to the promotors, who are generally callous men out to choke the last dollar in sight. Nothing so arouses a feeling of avarice and greed in the breast of the fight proprietors as a large advance sale, and woe to the fighter who, through injury or ill health, refuses to keep his engagements on the dot.

So Schaff bowed to the vicious rule that "the fight must go on" and kept his appointment with the dar kangel. Just so with Doyle who, though crippled in the head, was pushed into the ring by pursuasion that this was his golen chance to win the welterweight title, although the wisemen in his line of work knew that he was no more than a guinea pig in a clinical assault. The people who bought tickets at prices ranging from $5.50 to $15 came in the sample trust that, if fortune was kind, they would see somebody hurt.

The ringside physicians in Cleveland are, as everywhere in the land, political appointees whose job depends not so much on their medical knowledge as on who they know in power. They learn, that to hold their sinecure, they must not be unduly queasy in stopping a fight in order to afford the patrons as near an approach to mayhem as their admittance money entitles them to, a very delicate task to ask of the best doctor in these times of preventative medicine.

IT IS A JOB THAT CALLS for rare tact, in the matter of judging from a distance whether one more gouge at an open wound will injure an important nerve or one more slam at the head will knock the recipent permanently silly. So doctors of the liberal school have made many pathetic martyrs to their errors in judgment, men who may be seen tap-tapping around the fight gymnasiums with canes, or performing the fighter's jig, a jerky leg action which comes from excessive hammerings around the brain.

Maybe the insurance companies have statisticized such casualties of dizzy, blind and slap-drunk veterans. With some small research I think I could make you up a roll call of a hundred or more who can see slightly, if at all. And you may recall how old Sam Langford, blinded from a punch by Fred Fulton, fought on for a year by a kind of crude Braille system of accepting a punch from his opponent and timing his return blows by the direction from which it came. Until at length he knocked his pponent through the ropes and kept on milling and flailing at a man who was not there. So they said, "Tsk, tsk, old Sam is blind," and led him away to the poor house.

This fighting which we have today is an embarrassing attempt to compromise between crude violence and sport. The results are seldom satisfactory, for the patrons and promoters think there is no worse bore than a clever boxing exhibition and no worse knock can be delivered against the box office in any impending card than to predict it will be a contest devoid of brutality. A fight promoter could sue you for saying that.

The best in the prize ring business is the fighters who cast science to the winds and go in windmilling and chopping away in the hope that they can axe their man down before they get axed. Which is why the customers always flocked to see such human oddities as Tony Galento, Hambone Kelly and others whose style was strictly fishpier. They had a guarantee of somebody getting bloodied up.

Commercialized fistics has had many tragic warnings in the past, but until the authorities step in and give the game a thorough delousing, the fighters who are either too young or too old will continue being martyred to the greeds and lusts of the folk who are out to make a buck at all cost.

Robinson's K.O. Victim Fights Battle for Life

CLEVELAND, June 25 (AP)—Jimmy Doyle lost his bid for the world's welterweight title last night but was fighting a ba ttle for his life in Charity Hospital today after undergoing an operation for removal of a bl ood clot on his brain.

The stricken fighter was still unconscious and attendants at the hospital said his condition remained critical. Oxygen was being administered to aid his breathing. The Rev. James W. Nagel, hospital chaplain, administered the last rites of the Catholic Church.

The operation was performed by Dr. Spencer Braden, noted Cleveland brain specialist.

Doyle was carried from the arena ring on a stretcher and rushed to the hospital after welterweight champion Ray (Sugar) Robinson floored him with a vicious left hook in the eighth round of a scheduled 15-round championship bout before 11,275.

Hospital attendants said he apparently was suffering from respiratory paralysis plus a blood clot and concussion. Effects of the operation could not be determined immediately.

He was placed beneath an oxygen tent and carbon dioxide and oxygen were being given continuously.

After Robinson delivered the blow, Doyle fell flat on his back, unconscious, and his head bounced off the canvas with a sickening thud as referee Jackie Davis prepared to start his count.

The bell ending the round sounded when Davis' toll reached nine, but the fight was over as Dr. Arthur Hagedor, Cleveland boxing commission physician, and Doyle's handlers were unable to revive him.

It was the second time that Doyle had been carried from the local ring and taken to a hospital. He suffered a brain concussion March 11 a year ago when middleweight Artie Levine came from behind to belt Jimmy to the canvas. On the way down, Doyle struck his head on a ring buckle and was out of action for nine months. He started his comeback last December and had won five bouts since that time.

Under rules of the Cleveland boxing commission, the fight officially went into the record books as a technical knockout in the eighth round, although that heat had been completed.

Up to the tragic finish the fight had been all Robinson's with the exception of a few short rallies by the Californian.

Charge 'Ringer' At Canadian Tracks

HAMILTON, Ont., June 25 (AP)—The charge that a "ringer" won a race at Woodbine Park and later ran fourth in a race at Long Branch caused the Incorporated Canadian Racing Association to suspend two trainers and two horses yesterday.

Suspended trainers were Dr. R. K. Hodgson and Joseph Brazeau, the horses suspended from racing are the 4-year-old Willegit and the 3-year-old Fifty-Seven. The allegation is that the horse that won actually was Willegit.

It was also alleged that Willegit ran under the name of Fifty-Seven in a race at Long Branch last Saturday, finishing fourth behind Moldy, the King's Plate winer, in another race for 3-year-olds.

American Girl Tennis Winner

LONDON, June 25 — Queen Mother Mary made a ceremonious entry into Wimbledon Stadium today to see an American girl win her match in the second round of the All-England tennis championships.

Wearing a pink-flower toque and a white ensemble, the Queen arrived in time to see Mrs. Patricia Canning Todd of Lajolla, Cal., polish off Mrs. Anita Lizana Ellis, formerly of Chile, 6—3, 6—2.

The Queen closely watched the brilliant play of Mrs. Todd especially in the seventh game of the second set which went to deuce five times before Mrs. Todd crashed through to win.

Mrs. Todd quickly won the first four games in the opening set. Then Mrs. Ellis rallied to take the next three on three brilliant drives just inside the line.

The American's speed and accuracy forced her opponent into repeated errors.

Two Australians, Geoffrey Brown and C. F. Long, opened the first round of men's double play with a fairly easy victory over the Britishers, R. McKenzie and J. E. Robson, 6—1, 6—1, 7—5.

The Australians had too much class and experience for the homebreds and they merely loafed through the final set to give the Britishers a few consolation games.

Doyle Should Never Be Permitted to Fight Again---Corum

By BILL CORUM

International News Service Sports Writer

CLEVELAND, June 25 (INS)—They had the old gentleman sweating in the Arena here last night, because for the secon dtime in a matter of months they had him trying to describe on the air what looked to be—and may still prove to be—another prize ring fatality.

For the second time in less than two years, pebble game little Jimmy Doyle, of Los Angeles, had to be carried out of the red, white and blue roped arena ring on a stretcher.

Only a few minutes ago, as I write this against a train schedule instead of a deadline, for a change, a friend of Joe Williams phoned me from the St. Vincent's Charity Hospital, where he himself is a patient, to say that Doyle had recovered consciousness at last, but that the doctors were far from pleased with his condition.

Since this personable and pleasant youngster had spent weeks in the same hospital after Artie Levine had knocked him out in the same ring, it would seem that this must be the final proof both to the boy and all boxing promoters and boxing commissions that he must never fight again.

Just as the ponderous Primo Carnera finished what Max Baer had started in Chicago for the ill-fated Ernie Schaaf, Ray Robinson came perilously close to Doyle, after Levine had left him with some sort of dangerous weakness about the head.

Save for the threat of tragedy that pervaded the finish and cast gloom over a near-capacity crowd of almost 12,000 folks, who had paid just short of $80,000, it was about as fast and furious an encounter as could be imagined.

The remarkable Robinson, fighting in his own league again, came as close to the Robinson of old in a dazzling exhibition of boxing and bayonet sharp jabbing and hitting that would have stopped a less determined boy than Doyle before it did.

With that long, darting, piston-like left jab, varied with smashing hooks, jaw-jolting uppercuts and right crosses, straight from the book, added to many a savage body shot, the Sugar Shocker was veritably a champion.

Perhaps he isnt' quite as dizzy fast as he was. Perhaps he is a trifle more inclined to tire in those roaring rallies in which he specializes. Perhaps he doesn't like a fellow to hound him and keep ripping at him all the way as Doyle did.

But when he must have it—given a man anywhere close to his own weight—the chocolate ghost from Harlem must surely be about as finished a ringman as ever danced in risen.

The left hook that lifted Doyle off his feet, crossed his eyes and turned his face gray, must have been as clean and perfect a knockout blow as was ever landed.

The writer can only say must have been, for, truthfully, he didn't se it. The round was drawing to on end and I had turned my head to pick up a piece of paper on which were scribbled some notes when that ripping left cut Jimmy down.

I heard the roar and looked up just in time to see him fall and to se and hear the crack as the back of his head struck the canvas. But I had to turn to those near me to make sure whether the last punch had been a left or a right.

In the meantime, Referee Jackie Davis was tolling up to "nine," when the bell rang ending the round. So there ensued one of those inevitable, perennial and trivial arguments as to whether the fight ended in the eighth or ninth round.

In most places it would have been called a TKO in the ninth because of Doyle's inability to come out for that round. Under the Ohio rules, in a booklet finally produced, however, it apparently will go into the books as an eighth round knockout.

Jimmy Doyle wasn't going to come out if the next round had been the 90th instead of the ninth.

As the doctor worked over him in the center of the ring and the frightened Robinson walked round and round the little group bending over the prostrate body, Doyle did move his arms and his lips and eyelids twitched. But these must have been only reflexes.

So Jimmy Doyle is thorugh with the ring. He was outclassed against Robinson even if it hadn't hapened as it did. But the kid didn't know it, or wouldn't admit it even to himself.

He had dreamed, and believed, that he was going to upset the spectacular "Sugar" and he was in there charging and winging all the way.

There were times when he tired and tried Ray to the utmost, too, and ruffled him no little. But that was as close as he could come. Probably would have come had it gone the full 15.

For it was Robinson's fight and Ray flayed him and lashed him and stopped him so dead still in his tracks at times that you wondered if he was knocked out on his feet but just refused to fall. This, particularly, as the furious fifth round came to its close.

But whatever glory there is in this sort of thing was Jimmy Doyle's last night. Let's hope that he will get well again, as he did before, and keep the memory of that. But let's be sure that he never puts on boxing gloves again.

To permit him to do so anywhere in this country would be a crime outright, and nothing else.

The last minute report on Doyle's condition, as I rush this off the already moving train, is that he is in an oxygen tent suffering from a cerebral hemorrhage, and that he received the last rites of the Catholic Church at 12:30 a. m.

'SUGAR' LOSES

CLEVELAND, June 25 (INS)—Legal action was the only course open today for Ray Robinson to collect any part of the radio fees paid for the broadcast of his welterweight championship fight last night in Cleveland with Jimmy Doyle.

Judge Frank J. Merrick refused to issue an injunction which would have banned the broadcast unless Robinson were given a share in the funds.

Judge Merrick ruled that the broadcast would do Robinson no harm, the only basis on which it could be stopped by court order.

WHAT STARS DID

By the Associated Press

JACKIE ROBINSON, Dodgers—Got one hit in four times at bat—beating out a single to second in the first inning. He stole home in the fifth, hit into a force play in the third and bounced out in the eighth.

STAN MUSIAL, Cardinals—Singled to right, lined a home run on the right field roof for his eighth of the season in the fourth, walked and scored on Joe Medwick's home run in the sixth and grounded out in the eighth.

Hank Greenberg (Pirates), Ted Williams (Red Sox) and Joe DiMaggio (Yankees) did not play.

Rain Causes Friendly Feud Between Mgrs. Joe Cronin and Steve O'Neill

By HERB FINNEGAN

There is a little matter of a double header to be settled with Detroit today before the Red Sox move to Washington to night, and the doubleheader is the result of last night's rain. There's always rain, it seems, when the Sox play Detroit.

There was the Sunday in July of '46 when Ted Wiliams was taken ill with ptomaine poisoning. Wiliams was murdering the ball at the time, and the Tigers still were thinking of overtaking the Sox. They were anxious to meet the Sox in their weakened condition.

It looked for a while as if they wouldn't. It rained cats and dogs, mules and horses. It rained until 2 p. m. But at 2:30 Steve O'Neill approached Cronin and said: "We're playing, Joe. I understand Williams is out, and that makes it perfect for us."

Perfect, on paper, that was. For Bobby Doerr stepped into Ted's cleanup spot, combed Hal Newhouser for two home runs and won the game for the Sox, one decision for Cronin.

There was rain again three weeks ago in Detroit. Yanks not only had taken three of four from the Tigers but Stirnweiss had spiked Kell, and it was announced the third baseman would be sidelined 10 days. In addition, Dizzy Trout was in the hospital.

This was the break of the year for the Sox, it seemed. They had dropped four in a row to the Yanks, took two of three from the A's but had lost a doubleheader in Washington on Memorial Day, had a 1-1 record in Chicago, 1-1 in St. Louis. Thus their road record was 4-9 entering Detroit, they were in fifth place under .500, five games behind the pace.

Here was a beautiful chance to clean up the three-game series. But after the Sox got two men on against Trucks in Friday's opener, down came the rain and the game was off.

Would O'Neill play two Saturday? He would not. It rained again Saturday and the game was off. Would O'Neill play two Sunday? He would not, not with his Tigers in their condition. He'd play 'em on the Sox next trip west.

So the Sox lost a beautiful chance to improve on their road record which was 4-9 at the time, and when Sunday's sun appeared Kell not only was stationed at third base but Hal Newhouser was primed for battle.

Result? Newhouser blanked the Sox with four hits, and Kell's two hits knocked in two of the Tigers' five runs. Sox road record was now 4-10. O'Neill got the better of that rainy day argument. So now O'Neill had squared things with Cronin.

And so it came around to the current series. Tigers were sipping the dregs. They had lost nine in a row before they hit town and proceeded to make it 10 when they faced Denny Galehouse Monday. They looked like a soft touch for the Sox, and 34,000 had planned to turn out last night to see the Sox pin defeat No. 11 on the 1945 world champions.

There was the rain again. Now, who'll get the better of this one, Cronin or O'Neill?

You can bet the day off didn't hurt the Tigers. They were badly in need of a rest, More, they had their two aces, Newhouser and Trout, ready for today's twin bill.

But the layoff didn't hurt the Sox either. Gutteridge had a chance to rest his braised foot and was skipping around as friskly as ever today. Rookie Mel Parnell would have faced Newhouser last night but today regulars Ferriss and Hughson were ready for Newhouser and Trout.

Who'll get the better of this rain-caused duel, Cronin or O'Neill? The answer will be known tonight.

Doubleheader—First game at 1:30.

Sox Head for Capital; Home Monday for Yanks

Sox take the 11 o'clock tonight for Washington where they have a night game tomorrow, single day games Friday and Saturday. They'll play a doubleheader in Philadelphia Sunday before returning to Fenway to face the Yanks in Monday's arelight game, a sell-out from way back . . . Sox have won 11 of 14 games since Cronin became a bench manager, or rather retired from the coaching lines, and their current home record is 8-2.

"Galehouse has improved his curve since he last pitched for Boston," said Cronin. "He always could get the ball over the plate. He should be a big help, what with Harris ailing and Hughson and Ferriss not themselves yet" . . . Cronin likes experience in the pennant stretch. Last year he picked up Mike Higgins, Wally Moses and Don Gutteridge, and all three saw service in the World Series . . . This year he picked up Frankie Hayes, later released, Birdie Tebbetts, relief pitcher "Tammany" Murphy and Galehouse . . . The club changes considerably from year to year with the exceptions of Doerr, Pesky, DiMaggio and Williams.

Consider this: Of the 43 players the Sox took to Sarasota last winter, all these have gone: pitchers Butland, Clark Fine, Widmar, Wilson, Heflin; catchers McGah, Hayes, Wagner; infielders Albright (now with the Phils), Combs, Dente, Flair, Kozar, Konecy, Rocco, Shofner; outfielders Layden, Goodman, Metkovich, McBride. Baseball's a precarious way of making a living . . . Cronin is delighted with the play of Sam Mele, who played a fine center field while DiMaggio was sidelined and who now is back in right. "Only hope he keeps hitting," said Cronin. Mele has dipped below .300 for the first time this season, but he's meeting the ball solidly.

Hearst Sandlot Trials At Nashua Tomorrow

By JACK CONWAY, JR.

NASHUA, N. H., is a city of two extremes. First, it is the smallest city (35,000) to sponsor a Record-American-Sunday Advertiser sandlot baseball tournament; secondly, it is the greatest athletic center of any of these 10 sponsoring cities.

Last year, more than 220 sandlot players under 19 years of age reported to Holman Stadium for the tryouts. This figure exceeded every other city in the circuit with the exception of Boston, which drew 275.

Fred Dobens reports that Nashua will be just as good this year.

The Nashua tryouts are set for tomorrow afternoon at Holman Stadium at 1 p. m. Bob Vickery, manager of the Nashua Dodgers of the New England League, will be in charge of the selecting of players to represent that area in the N. E. final at Fenway Park July 29.

Bob has a group of able aides in "Buzz" Harvey, Nashua high coach; Bill Sweeney, recreation director; Bob Murray, American Legion director; Joe Sullivan, former N. H. U. star, and Al Clarke, Dodgers' business manager.

Saturday the Hearst baseball board will invade Lynn's Fraser Field for another trial. It is scheduled for 9 a. m. and will be in charge of Mike Ryba, manager of the Lynn Red Sox; Claude Davidson, president of the N. E. League; Bill Barrett, Red Sox scout, and Dick O'Connell, business manager for the Lynn Sox.

This tourney is absolutely free for all competitors.

Salem Golfer Among First in Hearst Junior

Jimmie Quinn, Jr., 16, of Salem High School, and John Pearson, 15, of the North Andover Golf Club, rate the distinction of being the first two junior golfers in New England to post entries for the Hearst N. E. Junior Golf championships.

Since those first two entries reached this office a few days ago, the entry box has been filling up steadily. The number of early entries indicates that this year's tournament will be one of the greatest ever conducted by these papers.

The prize to the finalists can not be compared to anything ever offered amateur players. Finals at beautiful Woodland Country Club, Newton, and then the Hearst Grand National final at Los Angeles, Cal.

The first of the qualifying rounds in N. E. will be held next Monday morning at the Pawtucket Golf Club, Pawtucket, R. I.

Other qualifying rounds are set for the South Shore Country Club, Hingham, July 2; Merrimack Valley Country Club, Lawrence, July 7, and Wachusetts Country Club, West Boylston, July 11.

The final round begins at Woodland, July 21.

Clip your entry coupon from today's Record or American and mail it into the Junior Golf Editor, Boston Record-American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

All entrants will play their qualifying round at the course nearest to their homes.

This tournament is free.

Nettelbladt Takes 1-Stroke Lead Into Mass. Open Final

By ARTHUR SULLIVAN

Although twice previously stumped in his quest for the Mass. Open golf title, Carl Nettelbladt of Avon, Ct., has his sights leveled on the crown that will become his if he can hold his advantage in today's final round at the Belmont C. C.

Nettelbladt registered a one over par 72 in yesterday's morning round (the afternoon round was washed out, necessitating the finals being played today) to post a 213 total for 54 holes.

The only apparent obstacle in Nettelbladt's path is Gene Kunes, Englewood, N. J., former Canadian Open titlist who fired a 75 to trail by a single point.

In previous Mass. Open play, Nettelbladt lost to Harold "Jug" McSpaden and Gene Anderson, both times at Oyster Harbors.

Prior to embarking on this morning's tour of the treacherous Belmont course, Nettelbladt reflected on the jinx that has plagued amateur golfers in the Mass. Open competition. Since its inception in 1902, only Jesse Guilford and Francis Ouimet have won the title as amateurs. In each of the other 37 tournaments, the championship has gone to professionals.

Dilboy Post Boxing Series Opens Tonight

Amateur boxing will return to a regular weekly schedule tonight at Dilboy Field, Somerville, where the George Dilboy Post, V. F. W., will stage the first in its series of floodlight programs.

In the event of a postponement, the matches will be put over to Thursday night.

Top competition in the show might very well be offered in the two top-weighted divisions. In the 175-pound class, Dave Burns, a B. C. student from Dorchester, will battle it out for honors against Bill Riggs, Roxbury, and Rocky Mello, Providence, R. I., while in the top weighted class, Lou Thresher, North End; Bob Gerard, Lynn; Frank Gill, Roxbury, and John Lapata, Dorchester, have filed entries.

One New England champion, bantamweight Frank Collins, Dorchester, and a Diamond Belt winner, Hal Sullivan, Sudan A. C., will bear watching.

Competition in the opening show will be in Classes A and B in all divisions from the 112's to heavyweights.

7 N. E. Athletes Named For National AAU Meet

The Track and Field Committee of the New England AAU has voted to send seven N. E. athletes to the National AAU championships at Lincoln, Neb., July 4-5.

The selected athletes are: Robert Bennett, Brown, hammer and 56-pound weight; Robert Norcom, New Hampshire, pole vault and high jump; John Fisher, Harvard, hammer and 56-pound weight; Bob Black, R. I. State, 5000 and 10,000 meters; Ed Styrna, Amscan, hammer and javelin; Wesley Flint, Harvard, senior and junior 120 high hurdles and 220 low hurdles, and Carl Joyce, High School of Commerce, junior and senior 880 yard run.

Chalk Up Another Bass Derby; This Time It's on North Shore

By "TAP" GOODENOUGH

It would seem that anyone catching a striped bass this season will win some sort of a prize, judging by the number of "Derbies" now on the schedule. Harry J. Reardon, Jr., president of the Cape Ann Sportsman's Club, has announced that the GGloucester organization has decided to conduct a striped bass tournament—at least they're not calling it a "Derby"— July 15 to Sept. 15, offering more than $1500 worth of prizes.

In addition to large cash awards for contestants hooking the biggest fish, other prizes include a week's vacation for two at well-known Gloucester inn; paintings by two famous artists; valuable sporting equipment, and the like.

The entry fee is $2. For blanks and further information, write to the Gloucester Chamber of Commerce; or Leon Lothrop, chairman of the tournament committee, Duncan st., Gloucester.

North Shore striper enthusiasts claim that fishing in their area equals, if not surpasses, the sport on the South Shore; hence, this contest . . . "Our fish here run big and are really vicious," states one oldtimer . . . Maybe 'twill be dangerous to take one of these specimens!

ANGLING ANGLES: The famed Maine tuna tournament at Bailey Island is set for July 26-29. Applications may be obtained from James Herrick, secretary of the Bailey Island Tuna Club. Plenty of guides and boats will be on hand this year, but we suggest making reservations early . . . More on this later.

Trout fishermen should be delighted with the plastic waders which have hit the market. These new "boots" can be folded and carried in a pocket, and may be worn over sneakers.

From the northwest Miramichi in New Brunswick, Canada, comes word of a good run of Atlantic silver salmon and sea-trout . . . The first "bright" Atlantic salmon to be caught in this stream this month were taken by D. W. Griffiths, N. B. travel director, and Harold Morgan, of Fredericton . . . In New Hampshire, strikers are running in Great Bay and the Piscataqua River . . . The southern rivers of Maine now have bass, too, many reported in the Saco river

Ace Instructors Aid Swim Campaign

Braves Reveal Southworth as No. 1 Pilot

By BILL GRIMES

FT. WAYNE, Ind., June 25—In order for him to be unanimously recognized as baseball's No. 1 manager, Billy Southworth had to quit the Cardinals and take over the Braves.

During the years he was winning pennants and World Series with the Cards, Southworth never was given credit for his uncanny managerial ability. The stock expression in those days was "anyone could win with the Cardinals." Such a line of reasoning was a rank injustice to Billy.

Many of the country's outstanding experts watched the Braves last spring in Florida. They liked Southworth and felt sorry for him. Although they didn't say so, the critics probably asked themselves, "Who could win with the Braves?"

The answer is Southworth.

Don't misunderstand me. I'm not predicting that the Braves will win the pennant. I've seen all of the N. L. clubs and the Cardinals are still the class of the league.

But I will say, and I honestly mean it, that there are four clubs in the league that Southworth could pilot to the pennant—St. Louis, Chicago, Brooklyn, and New York. Moreover, if he was managing Pittsburgh, he'd have the Bucs crowding some club out of the first division.

Southworth is another John McGraw, minus profanity, fines, suspensions and ridicule. He's a psychologist, a firm believer that a word of praise gets far better results. He devotes a tremendous amount of time instilling confidence in his players.

After kicking away last Friday's game in Chicago, the Braves expected a blast from the boss. They were deserving of anything a manager could call them. Southworth was boiling mad, but didn't utter a single word to any player in the dressing room after the game. Silently the players waited for the roof to fall in on them. The longer they waited, the tighter the tension became. Finally, Southworth and his coaches, Johnny Cooney and Ernie White, departed. Silence still reigned.

Then one of the comedians, after assuring himself that Southworth was out of earshot, remarked: "The old silent treatment is tougher to take than an all-out blast."

Southworth had a clear mental picture of every mistake his players made while blowing that game to the Cubs. Moreover, he knew that the players who had fallen down on the job realized what they'd done. So "Mr. Psychology," elected to allow his boys to sleep on their errors. But before they left for Wrigley Field for the second game the following noon, six players had been called in on the carpet. The Braves won the next two games.

I've seen Southworth maneuver the Braves, who were slated by the experts to stage a six-months' battle with the Phillies for last place, to the top rung of the standings. I'm frank to admit, I don't know how he did it.

135 Amateurs Tee Off In U. S. Senior Tourney

RYE, N. Y., June 25 (AP)—A group of 135 amateur golfers, all over 55 years of age, prepared to tee off today on the second 18-hole round of the U. S. Senior championship at Apawamis Country Club. A second group of about 200 will play Thursday and Friday.

In yesterday's opening round, J. Ellis Knowles, 66, a five-time former champion, and Duane L. Tower, Niagara Falls, N. Y., shared the lead with scores of 76. Knowles is from the Apawamis Club.

Babe Ruth Back In Hospital

NEW YORK, June 25 (AP)—Babe Ruth returned to the hospital yesterday on the advice of his physicians for further treatment. "I felt very tired," he explained. "I couldn't seem to get any strength and decided to take things easy for a few weeks."

The former home run king was discharged from the hospital two months ago after being there for almost three months during which he underwent a serious neck operation.

Ruth accepted a position as consultant to the American Legion junior baseball program and had made a number of public appearances in that connection since leaving the hospital.

"I even get tired taking a walk around the living room," the Babe was quoted by friends as saying. "I can't seem to gain any strength, so I guess I'll just get some rest here at the hospital."

YESTERDAY'S STARS

By the Associated Press

PITCHING: Clarence (Hooks) Iott, Giants—Celebrated his debut as a New York starter by blanking the Cubs, 11-0, with two hits. He fanned eight.

BATTING: Vern Stephens, Browns—Drove in six runs with a grand slam home run and two singles to lead the Browns to a 12-3 victory over the Athletics.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

LOS ANGELES, June 25 (AP)—Ten thousand fight fans sang "happy birthday to you" to ex-heavyweight champion Jack Dempsey at the Olympic Auditorium last night.

Dempsey, blushing and obviously flustered at the booming chorus, was presented by Al Jolson.

Jolson announced that it was Jack's 37th birthday. Dempsey retorted that he was only 32.

In reality, it was the old champ's 52nd birthday.

Mayor Curley Pleads for Probation

Kayoed In Fight, Boxer's Conditon Critical

A doctor and a second try to revive Jimmy Doyle in the ring at Cleveland after he was knocked unconscious by Ray (Sugar) Robinson in the 8th round of their welterweight championship fight. Taken to a hospital, Doyle was in critical condition today after undergoing a brain operation. Hospital attendants said the fighter suffered respiratory paralysis, plus a blood clot on the brain and concussion. He has received last rites of the Catholic Church. See below . . .

Curley in Capital—Thin, weary and showing the ravages that his recent illness wrought, Mayor James M. Curley is wheeled out of Union Station, Washington, D. C., at completion of his trip to face federal court. His daughter, Mrs. Mary Curley Donnelly (left) attends her father.
